Order of Canada

Companions Chevrier, Dupuy, Jackson; medal holders Gimby, Greene, Whitton, Karsh

Centennial, Expo Brass Make Latest List

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifteen more Canadians have been named Companions of the Order of Canada and 43 have been awarded the order's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today.

In his capacity as chancellor of the order, Michener announced the appointments to complete the first year's awards of the new honors instituted to reward Canadians for service to the country.

The list contained the first appointments of retired politicians, and was sprinkled with the names of Canadians who headed Expo 67 and other centennial events.

Newly-named companions of the order, who will be invested with red and white neck ribbons and pendants, are entitled to put the initials C.C. after their names. They include:

Lionel Chevrier, commissioner-general of state visits for 1967, former Canadian high commissioner in London and long-time Liberal cabinet minister.

Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Expo 67, and his deputy, Robert Shaw. Artist A. Y. Jackson, singer Lois Marshall and historian Hilda Neatby.

Among recipients of the medal of service are: John Fisher, chief commissioner of the federal centennial commission, and his deputy, Georges E. Gauthier, along with Bobby Gimby, author of the popular centennial song "Canada-da."

mayor, and photographer Yousuf Karsh.

The order was instituted July 1 when Governor-General Michener was invested with his ribbon and pendant by the Queen. The first list of awards was issued July 7 and contained the names of 35 companions and 55 medal winners.

Today's Government House

announcement said the selection of winners was made by an advisory council on the basis of merit, "especially service to Canada or humanity at large."

The advisory council is composed of Chief Justice Robert Cartwright, heads of the Canada Council, the Royal Society of Canada, and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and two senior government officials — R. G. Robertson, clerk of the privy council, and G. G. E. Steele, undersecretary of state.

The announcement said the council "has followed the policy of deferring until after their retirement, consideration of party politicians, judges serving on the bench, or members of the advisory council itself."

Further awards will be made next year. Provision was made in the order's charter for appointment of 25 companions and 50 medal-of-service winners each year, but to start the order in Centennial Year, double the number were named.

The order's charter also provides for awarding medals of courage for outstanding bravery. None has yet been awarded.

'I've Done a Lot' — Medal Winner

A Victoria poet and a part-time Ardmore resident have been named recipients of the Order of Canada's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today in Ottawa.

They are Audrey Alexandra Brown of 423 Superior, an author and life-long Vancouver Island resident, and Francis G. Winspear, a financier living at 687 Ardmore Drive.

Mr. Winspear, who lives most of the year at Edmonton, is a former president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Brown, 63, was born in Nanaimo and has lived since 1936 in Victoria.

Miss Brown, presently employed as a dispatcher for Sea Breeze Express, is the author of six books, including A Dryad of Nanaimo and All Fools' Day.

In 1941 she received the Lorne Pierce Medal from the Royal Society of Canada, for distinguished contribution to Canadian literature. She was the first woman to receive the honor.

"I'm a very well-known writer," she commented Friday night, "I'm no Johnny-come-lately."

"I think I have done a lot for the world of literature in Canada and that's why I have received this latest honor," she added.

But she gave no credit for "my success" to Victoria newspapers who she said "just have not recognized me."

She added she would have welcomed publicity even if it was critical of her writings.

"When nothing is said about me nothing happens, but if you had even written pasty things about me I would have been consoled by sympathizers," she told a reporter.

"They all knew about me in the east and Europe. The library in Victoria has a lot about me."

Writer Rejects 'Second' Label

TORONTO (CP) — Author Morley Callaghan of Toronto has turned down a Medal of Service of the Order of Canada because he says it would make him and other Canadian writers appear second-rate.

Callaghan said he considered a medal "a rank of second class" in comparison with the order's other decorations — Companion of the Order.

The companions named in the first honors list in July included Montreal poet F. R. Scott, Winnipeg novelist Gabrielle Roy and Montreal novelist Hugh McLennan.

"If writers are being given orders of the first class when I object to being one of the second class," Callaghan said in an interview.

"All my life in Canada I have stood for an adult view of literature."

"I don't give a damn one way or another about this award. And I'm willing to applaud every medal, donation or award anyone else gets. But this is setting up a pecking order in writing."

Claude Bisell, president of the University of Toronto, last year described Callaghan as Canada's greatest novelist. Edmund Wilson, American literary critic, has called him "the most unjustly neglected novelist in the English-speaking world."

Callaghan said the order was "a game having to do with vanities."

He said more and more Canadians had appetites for honors and titles and that the government was doing its best to feed them.

At 63, Callaghan is the author of two plays, 15 books and more than 100 short stories.

Pakistan—Then Rome?

JOHNSON HIDES IN SKY

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistani officials said President Lyndon Johnson was stepping here en route home from Vietnam. They said President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was flying here to meet Johnson.

The best guess for the next major stop was Rome and a visit in Vatican City with Pope Paul to talk on peace in Vietnam.

Johnson apparently decided to make a round-the-world tour of his original visit to Australia to attend memorial services for its lost prime minister.

WORDS OF CHEER

Johnson flew to South Vietnam from an air force base in Thailand and landed, as he had more than a year before, at Cam Ranh, beside the South China sea. There and in Thailand he gave words of cheer, distributed medals and uttered his thanks to the troops.

He told 2,500 combat troops at Cam Ranh their enemy "knows that he has met his master in the field."

"We're not going to yield and we're not going to shimmy," he said.

IN GOOD SHAPE

At one point, before a throng of cheering soldiers, he told the U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, "I wish I had things in as good shape in the United States as you have here."

Bareheaded and wearing brown slacks and a khaki shirt, the president appeared high-spirited as he went through a packed, 105-minute visit to the base. His plane, escorted by four Phantom jets, touched down at 8:40 a.m. and left at 10:25 a.m.

BY CHRISTMAS

Officials would not confirm his next destination but said he will be in the White House Christmas day, Monday.

Johnson was met at Cam Ranh by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in

McCarthy

LBJ Foe Scorches Networks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem. Minn.) asked the Federal Communications Commission Friday to order the U.S. radio-television networks to give him air time for a reply to President Johnson's statements made in a Tuesday night broadcast.

The three major networks said, in rejecting McCarthy's request, that he is not entitled to equal time under the Communications Act because the president is not declared a candidate for re-election.

McCarthy plans to enter several primary elections—in which party registrants indicate their preference of candidates—in a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

McCarthy's campaign manager, Blair Clark, telegraphed a formal complaint to the FCC against the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

For the networks to pretend that Johnson is not a candidate for re-election "is to deny a fact which every American child knows," Clark's wire said.

Clark repeated McCarthy's contention that Johnson "made a clear personal attack" on the senator in Tuesday night's broadcast, and said "it would be most dangerous for our democracy to deny his declared opponents the same access to the public airways."

Pearson Toast

'Libre' Echoes To Laughter

By RICHARD JACKSON, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Hall . . . and farewell. And do you know what Prime Minister Pearson's toast to the new year is?

It happened at the privy council's staff Christmas party. They asked the boss to drop in for a drop, and he did.

It was a sentimental occasion, for it would be Pearson's last Christmas fling in the old East Block offices.

As they raised their glasses to the new year, Pearson proclaimed "Vive le Pearson libre."

It was a toast, in truth, to the night, 105 days from now, when he does, in fact, become "free"—free of that crushing load of national responsibilities that bow any prime minister's head, grey his hair, stoop his shoulders and make him old before his time.

But it broke up his staff, this wry take-off of a more famous "vive-libre" sounded last summer from the city hall balcony in Montreal by that old international trouble-maker Charles de Gaulle.

Somehow Lester Pearson's grinning, good-humored "vive-libre," cut down to size de Gaulle's very different "vive-libre."

While de Gaulle Boss

U.K. 'Giving Up' On Market Bids

LONDON (AP) — The Financial Times says Britain will not apply again to join the European Common Market while

French President de Gaulle still is in power.

Reginald Dale, the newspaper's European correspondent, says in an article:

"This is the government's reaction to the French veto on negotiations at Tuesday's council of ministers meeting in Brussels."

"From now on, Britain will concentrate on forging closer links with the (friendly) Five and no solution which involves the Common Market as such will be sought until there is a change of regime in France."

"The over-all direction of British policy will remain the same, however, and the government is confident of success in negotiations for . . . entry once General de Gaulle leaves the political arena."

The friendly Five are West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Car Crash Kills Man

HOPE (CP) — A man was killed and two women were seriously injured Friday when their car collided with a bus 28 miles east of here.

Several bus passengers suffered minor injuries.

Police said Alfred Kent, 63, of Port Huron was killed and his wife Doris and a friend, Mrs. Lilly Nichol, 51, were seriously injured.

Happiness Cheques Sent To End Goodwill Chain

Postal workers Friday forged the last link in the chain of good wishes from Victorians to their less fortunate fellow citizens.

They delivered 500 cheques for $33 each to needy families, whose names had been selected by the Victoria Christmas Bureau from more than 1,000 recommended for assistance by social workers and organizations.

The money was raised through the Daily Colonist 500 Fund.

In addition, Friday, seven more cheques were sent out, and will be delivered this morning to people who wouldn't otherwise be getting help.

Last-minute donations to the fund saw the total climb past the $17,000 to set a record high for the help. The Colonist was able to channel from generous subscribers for those in need.

Money left over will be kept in the fund to start off next year's drive.

Greek Regime Drafts Democracy

Papadopoulos

Army Loses 20 Officers

ATHENS — The Greek government Friday announced the retirement of 20 high-ranking officers, including eight generals. It said 15 left at their own request and five were dismissed, including one who fled to Turkey after the coup collapse.

ATHENS (Reuters) — Premier George Papadopoulos said Friday no agreement has been reached with King Constantine for the return of the 27-year-old monarch to Greece.

The premier was speaking at a press conference during which he outlined steps his government intends to take to return Greece to democratic rule.

Papadopoulos said a draft of the new constitution which embodied the steps would be ready today.

Papadopoulos said that once the draft is approved, it will be submitted to a referendum. The government will make amendments to the draft as it feels necessary, publish it and allow Greeks who wish to do so to submit further amendments, he said.

Once this process is completed "within 1968 the constitution will be approved and affirmed by a referendum," Papadopoulos said.

Asked about elections, he said these will be held as soon as possible after the referendum. However all the aims of the April revolution must first be achieved and all dangers from communism averted.

King Constantine, who fled to Rome with the royal family after an abortive attempt to topple Greece's current rulers, has laid down three conditions for his return from exile.

It is understood he wants an acceptable date for the publication of a new constitution, an early date for a referendum on it and an assurance that Greeks will be able to elect their own government.

United Reds Demand Israeli Pullout

From AP, LAT

Romania joined its Communist allies for the first time Friday in a united call for Israel to withdraw from Arab territory occupied during the six-day June war in the Middle East.

A joint communique issued in Warsaw said Romania and seven other East European Communist countries agreed Israeli withdrawal is "the main and absolute condition for restoring and maintaining peace in the Middle East."

The communique was published following a three-day conference here of the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, East Germany, Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia and deputy foreign ministers from Czechoslovakia and Romania.

At the UN, U Thant reported his special Middle East representative, Gunnar Jarring, had found Israel and three neighboring Arab countries co-operative and he plans a new round of talks with them separately Tuesday.

Meanwhile, reports from Tel Aviv said Israeli military officials are considering strong counter measures to combat increasing Arab terrorism in occupied Jordan, according to Chief of Staff Yitzhak Rabin.

Believing that the terrorism outlook is likely to get worse before it gets better, Rabin said he's sure technical means of sealing the border must be used to minimize penetration by terrorists.

The most dramatic of these under consideration would be the installing of mines and barbed-wire fences along 50 miles of the Jordan River.

Fulbright Demand

Destroyer Log Books May Clarify Tonkin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.) said Friday a number of questions have been raised about the Gulf of Tonkin incident which led the U.S. Congress to back

President Johnson's 1964 decision to bomb North Vietnam. "In order to clear up these uncertainties," Fulbright said, "the Senate foreign relations committee staff to study the logs of the two U.S. destroyers involved, the Maddox and the Turner Joy.

The defence department said it has conclusive evidence, including photographs, that the U.S. vessels were attacked by North Vietnamese torpedo boats without provocation in August, 1964. The department made available for publication four photos not heretofore released.

"The attacks were seen, heard and depicted electronically by the crews of the ships," a department statement said.

"Any suggestion that the August, 1964, attacks on U.S. destroyers in the Tonkin Gulf did not occur is contrary to the known facts."

LETTER SENT

Fulbright, who is telling his Arkansas constituents in a letter this week that U.S. involvement in Vietnam has been a mistake, said analysis of the department's evidence is incomplete.

In a statement concerning the background inquiry, Fulbright said that for some months the foreign relations committee, which he heads, has been receiving letters and information "from what we believe to be responsible individuals on the Gulf of Tonkin incident."

ON PATROL

On Aug. 2 and 4, 1964 the Maddox and Turner Joy were subjected to what the Johnson administration decided was an unprovoked and deliberate attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats while the destroyers were on patrol in international waters.

On Aug. 5 Johnson announced the U.S. was retaliating with an aerial attack and asked Congress for a resolution supporting the move.

The resolution was adopted two days later, approving and supporting Johnson's determination to "take all necessary measures to repel any armed attack against the forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression."

VOTE MISTAKE

Fulbright voted for the resolution but has since called his action a mistake. He contends Congress never intended to give Johnson a blank cheque for a war of the dimensions now being fought.

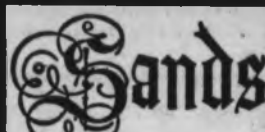

In his letter to constituents, Fulbright said he is convinced "from all the evidence presented thus far this war is not worth the price we are paying."

"This was not a case of aggression, as we have been led to believe, but rather a civil war between two factions of Vietnamese," he said.

NOT WILLING

"Our involvement has been a mistake and we seem unwilling to acknowledge that mistake and proceed to a settlement of some sort."

Fulbright said "The best support we can give our troops is to seek an end to the fighting by negotiated settlement."

Sharp Reaction

GREAT BRITAIN and her friends on the Continent still hope somehow to over-ride or in some fashion evade the second French veto against the British admission to the European Common Market.

With this end in view, Britain is now proposing to lead a coalition of friendly nations—presumably including France's five partners in the European Economic Community, as the Common Market is officially designated—in a pressure play directed against France.

Only the stubborn resistance of President Charles de Gaulle is preventing the closer integration of European nations, in a community of economic endeavor held desirable with the one formidable exception.

It is the aging general's contention that acceptance of the British entry would result in the paralysis of the European trading bloc. He believes, or claims to believe, that British admission would aggravate the problems of the present six members which, he says, are serious.

Such problems may exist, but the French president's argument is effectively ruptured by the report of the EEC headquarters in Brussels which shows the six members broke all records for exports, imports and internal exchange in the first nine months of 1967, and could boast of a surplus of exports over imports of close to $551,000,000.

The general, it becomes increasingly clear, does not intend to share this lucrative trade with the nation which once, when the fortunes of France were at their lowest ebb, offered a full partnership and which, incidentally, was a proponent of an integrated European community before the Common Market was in existence.

But General de Gaulle may have gone a step too far in his expressions of hostility towards the Anglo-Saxons. He may have seriously offended his own partners in the EEC. Indeed, he may have created an atmosphere in which opposition to his hopes for leadership in an integrated Europe will flourish.

There is an indication of this possibility in the announcement of the Netherlands' foreign minister, Mr. Joseph Luns, that the five EEC members sympathetic to the British aim will commence consultations with Britain with France excluded.

He added that the French refusal even to negotiate with Great Britain had created a "grave hour in the post-war history of Europe." He was "profoundly shocked," he said.

He expressed gratification that Britain would not abandon the effort to gain membership. In this it seems obvious all the so-called "Friendly Five" concur.

Any coalition which Britain proposes to lead would include the seven nations of the European Free Trade Association, in which she is the leading member, the Irish Free State and the five partners of France in the EEC. This is potentially a powerful alignment and might well induce General de Gaulle to reconsider his position.

Moreover, there is some reason to believe—as does General de Gaulle—that nations of the Commonwealth would in some fashion be included in a wider EEC trading alignment. And with such an advantage in prospect the contemplated coalition deserves support from the Commonwealth members for more than Britain's sake.

The Joke's Over

FOR YEARS MEN have considered women incompetent drivers. Indeed, ever since the gasoline buggy made its first appearance the lady motorist has been the butt of countless jokes and snide cartoons. Even husbands who normally display the utmost gallantry toward their wives have not been above entertaining their male colleagues with the latest story of the little woman's shortcomings behind the wheel of the family car.

It may therefore come as something of a shock to the boys who still think this way to learn that they are a rapidly disappearing species according to a recent survey conducted by the Traffic Safety Foundation of the American Automobile Association. And to give the report a local flavor it should be pointed out that the British Columbia Automobile Association is affiliated to this organization.

The informal survey, which was conducted to determine the needs for a study of a larger scope, showed that husbands today do not tend to think of their wives as poor drivers.

As a matter of fact, only one male driver of 50 questioned said that he considered his wife to be a poorer-than-average driver.

The Foundation suggests that the change in male attitude might reflect the considerable experience the average housewife gets these days in chauffeuring the children around.

The survey also showed that wives as a group considered their respective husbands to be better drivers than did husbands consider their wives. About 95 per cent of the wives thought their husbands to be better-than-average as compared with average and poorer-than-average.

However, when asked what kind of "most-needed" traffic safety advice they would give their husbands, the women interviewed had advice which would seem to apply more to bad drivers than to better-than-average types.

Examples of the kind of advice they would like to give their husbands ranged from suggesting that their husbands not drive so fast to paying more attention to the road instead of attempting to discipline the children while the car was in motion.

One possible conclusion drawn by the Foundation to this was that women might think that their husbands were skilled drivers but not particularly safety conscious.

Oddly enough husbands also thought their wives drove at too high a speed. Other husbandly advice was: drive in the middle of own lane; buckle safety belt; use turn signals; don't be timid; turn off turn signals.

General conclusions drawn from the survey, says the Foundation, would be that both husbands and wives are aware of driving habits which might result in an accident, and that each could spot these weaknesses in the other.

One more conclusion—which was not drawn by the Foundation—is that it appears that men are now prepared to regard their wives as equals behind the wheel of a car.

Another mighty blow struck in the cause of the emancipation of women.

Difficult to Find the Right Words

By GREG CONNOLLEY

A special Senate-Commons committee is trying awfully hard to come up with the right verses for O Canada which is to become officially our national anthem.

Most of the letters sent to the committee by English-speaking Canadians have proposed that the generally used Weir version be retained with some minor changes in the wording.

The same response has been true of French-speaking Canadians who like the present Rouhier version but want some alterations in the lyrics.

But the committee has heard other proposals that are more dramatic and revolutionary and which could provide a solution to this difficult task.

One of these was the suggestion of Mrs. Jack Ouellet of Quebec City for a bilingual O Canada with lines alternating in English and French. Yet another plan, submitted by Monsignor Maurice O'Bready, head of the Sherbrooke Normal School, proposed new verses for the French version and similar lyrics in English.

Objections were raised to Mrs. Ouellet's bilingual anthem because it was said many English-speaking Canadians would not be able to pronounce the French words.

As a splendid rebuttal to this she had the Ottawa Nepean high school choir, with only brief rehearsal, sing the anthem in an excellent fashion that quite moved the Senate-Commons committee.

Her version is as follows: O Canada! Our home — Notre Pays

Le Feuilles d'Erebe: One flag From sea to sea; Sol de liberte Sol d'egalite

Where freedom's banner flies; Chantons tous la gloire D'une riche histoire Our home 'neath northern skies...

O Canada! O ma patrie! Hold high the Maple Leaf o'er land and sea, O Canada! My country — Mon pays.

Mrs. Ouellet believed that youngsters could learn her lyrics in 30 minutes. And the children could quickly teach the words to their parents.

But some committee members said that even after all those years with the Weir version in English, very few Canadians knew the words. Indeed, Eric Morse of the Canadian Clubs thought the best procedure would be to retain the Rouhier and Weir versions for French and English-speaking Canadians.

He did agree that something should be done about the repetitious "we stand on guard for thee," in the English text.

Mrs. O'Bready reported that the "stand on guard" appeared 15 times in the Weir version. There was a platitude also of "from sea to sea" and "glorious and free."

He did not think too much of the Weir version but he was equally critical of the Rouhier words.

The first line, "O Canada, terre de nos aieux" (O Canada, land of our fathers) was fine, Msgr. O'Bready conceded. But the next line, "Ton bras est porteur l'epée" (Thine arm may bear the sword), was definitely not good.

Economic Step Forward

East Germany Imports Labor

By NEAL ASCHERSON from Berlin

WHILE snow lay on the fields, the red-and-white flag of Poland flew over the pumping station at Schwedt-on-Oder, in East Germany. In a ceremony attended by the Polish minister of construction, 209 miles of oil pipeline built by Polish engineers and labor were handed over.

The pipeline, carrying oil from the Soviet Union through Poland and across the Oder to the great chemical combine at Leuna in East Germany, supplies a whole series of industries on the way with fuel and raw materials.

But the real significance lay in the speeches. The Polish minister, Marian Olewinski, announced that up to 1975 a whole new series of Polish construction operations, involving joint construction of 15 in a joint project, would be undertaken in East Germany. In other words, it seems clear, the East Germans have finally decided to relieve their crippling lack of labor by importing large numbers of migrant workers from Poland.

Up to now, the East Germans had been cautious about such solutions. Although Germany was always a traditional work place for the Poles, the German Democratic Republic felt that to risk the creation of a foreign sub-class would be essentially unacceptably. Inhibitions about the terrible fate of the Polish slave laborers under the Third Reich probably played their part too.

But the brake which the labor shortage placed not only upon growth but on the efficient working of the new economic system, based on industrial autonomy and the laws of the market, has at last brought a change of heart.

Previously, the Polish pipeline force was an exception, apart from a certain commuting traffic across the Oder, but a few weeks ago in Leipzig, where slowness and mistakes led to the reshuffle of the whole team charged with the city's reconstruction, I found architects planning to indent for no less than 20,000 Poles to work on their building sites.

But Poland is not to be the only source. It was a Polish party newspaper, no doubt trying to nudge along Warsaw's own labor negotiations with East Berlin, which announced that Hungary had agreed to supply workers for East German industry who would eventually number

Nor was the third line where Canada had a forehead. "A land do not have an arm or a forehead — people should not have to sing foolishness," the clergyman told the committee.

So he proposed French verses which translate approximately in English as follows: "O Canada, thy boundless land proclaims thy glory and thy prosperity. Thine arm may bear the sword and the cross as well. Thine history is an epic tale of most glorious deeds. Thy merit, tempered in faith, shall protect our rights from all assaults."

Mrs. O'Bready granted that his English version could be improved. However he liked the idea of French and English Canadians singing anthems "words that were very similar."

"I would like the English and French who are holding of each other like cat and dog to find a meeting point, perhaps at the summit known as the national anthem."

Senator Maurice Bourget, committee co-chairman, suggested it wasn't absolutely necessary that French and English words be the same. After all, he said, Switzerland's national anthem was in five languages.

"Nothing compels us to imitate Switzerland," Msgr. O'Bready retorted.

He had an argument to offer too against the claim it would be difficult for Canadians to learn new words. Msgr. O'Bready pointed to the changes that were happening in his church through ecumenical developments.

"They have been making changes in the form of prayers like the Lord's Prayer. I am surprised at the speed with which the faithful accepted the new text," he said.

These then are some of the submissions the Senate-Commons committee hears as it wrestles with this problem of words for O Canada.

It is an extremely difficult matter and one of great delicacy.

New Attitude to Envoys

By EDWARD NEILAN from Hong Kong

THERE has been another flip-flop in Red Guard attitudes toward foreign diplomats based in Peking.

Yesterday it was an "in" thing for Red Guards to harass diplomats, tear their clothes, smear them with glue and sack embassy premises.

Today the game of "punch the diplomat" is strictly out of style.

There are confirmed reports from Peking that Chinese police guards outside most embassies now snap to ostentatious salutes whenever foreign ambassadors leave their embassies.

This is a far cry from the Red Guard rampages that culminated in the sacking of the British Embassy and the humiliation of London's Charge d'Affaires Donald Hopson.

This new attitude toward the foreign men in striped pants is another example of the growth of moderating influences noted in the conduct of the cultural revolution.

Specifically, a directive issued by the Communist Party's Central Committee recently stated:

1. "Foreigners who are staying in the People's Republic of China do so with the Chinese authorities' knowledge and will; 2. "All foreigners are under the protection of the authorities of the People's Republic; 3. "No individual, group or political organization has the right on its own initiative to start or carry through measures of any kind at all against the foreigners living in the People's Republic of China; 4. "Only the competent authorities of the People's Republic of China have the right to associate with these foreigners and — if occasion should arise — take measures against them."

5. "No individual, group or political organization has the right in future on their own initiative to carry out manifestations, demonstrations or other expressions of will against the foreigners staying in the People's Republic; 6. "Only the competent authorities of the People's Republic of China have the right — if it is thought necessary — to organize, carry out and supervise demonstrations or other political expressions of will in front of the foreign representations in the People's Republic of China; 7. "Actions contrary to this decree will be severely punished."

The directive represents an added triumph for Premier Chou En-lai and his followers at the expense of the previously powerful extremist faction in the ministry of foreign affairs. Policies pursued by a number of officials in this hard-line faction have recently been under attack.

On Oct. 18 a "struggle meeting" was reportedly held against Wang Ping-nan (the vice-minister who usually handles East European affairs). He was accused of being anti-Maoist, a member of the Liu Shao-chi-Teng Hsiao-ping head-quarters and morally corrupt.

Another vice-minister, Chen Chia-kang, was charged along with Wang. On the same day Chou En-lai's private office issued a telephone directive to the ministry of foreign affairs, party committee and supervisory subcommittee emphasizing surplus of 1,500,000 work-seekers over available jobs was predicted. This has not proved quite so serious.

Polish industry has developed unexpectedly fast, and at the end of September there were 152,000 open jobs available. In the last seven years, employment increased by 27 per cent, which is well over the planned figure. The problem is not yet solved, but the results of the "demographic explosion" have been for the moment held under control.

This may now change. But at least as far as Poland is concerned, the decision may have come rather late. A few years ago, the enormous post-war "bulge" in the birth-rate was about to leave school, and a

In Southeast Asia

Chinese Victimized

By ARTHUR J. DOMMEN from Jakarta

LOSING the fury of their mobs on the Chinese in their midst has been a time honored sport of governments in Southeast Asia, both colonial and native.

Whether to divert their peoples' attention from the filth and misery of their lot, or to cover up the insecurity of their rule, civilian and military men sitting in cabinet have usually been ready to countenance, to actively encourage and occasionally to instigate hooliganism against Chinese communities from Rangoon to Semarang.

Persecution of minority racial groups has been the price of national unity in several countries of the region, but the Chinese especially have proved fair game for plunder ever since the 11th century when the first Chinese settlers arrived on the shores of the Nanyang, or Southern Ocean.

The Chinese have always stood out. As a merchant class, they have earned a reputation for industry and thrift and in some cases have acquired an almost monopolistic control over commerce which has survived the death of colonialism and persisted to the present day.

The first known massacre of overseas Chinese occurred in Luzon in 1602. It was officially sponsored by the Spanish government of the Philippine Islands, which regarded the Chinese community as a threat to its security.

In innumerable instances since then, ordinary name-calling and harassment have developed into organized looting and killing.

Thus, when the pound sterling was devalued recently, thereby debasing the old currency of Malaya and British Borneo still in circulation in Malaya, the Malaysian government assiduously avoided taking any precautionary steps to protect the Chinese merchants whom it fully recognized would be the focus of ire from the Malays who had been hoarding their old coins and notes in the mistaken belief they would one day be worth more than their face value.

The resulting violence and lawlessness, which broke out in Penang and spread rapidly up and down the Malayan coast, left 27 dead in its wake and shops and homes burned down. The government then proceeded to arrest many of its political opponents, claiming on the basis of flimsy evidence that they had hatched a sinister plot to foment communal riots.

In this instance of politically useful racial strife, such killing as there was was notable for being indiscriminate in the victims it took. The frustration of people who suddenly found their money would get them 15 per cent less goods from the shops turned against the defenceless Chinese rather than the Malaysian government.

In other instances, however, victimization of the Chinese has been far more discriminating.

In Indonesia it has often been so. Of Indonesia's 2.75 million Chinese, 1.4 million have been granted Indonesian citizenship, affording them at least the wherewithal to assimilate themselves with the local inhabitants and carry on their business quietly and, they hope, escape the fury of the mobs. The historical record is against them, however.

The most notorious massacre of the overseas Chinese was ordered by the Dutch in Java in 1740. Since then there have been periodic outbreaks. In 1950 President Sukarno's unsuccessful attempt to regulate the Indonesian Chinese problem by negotiating a dual nationality treaty with Peking and banning Chinese from engaging in retail trade in the rural areas ended in renewed rioting.

In the steamy rain forest of West Borneo in recent weeks, hundreds of defenceless Chinese natives were killed by Dyak natives while the Indonesian government looked on. The killings, as deduced from the statements made by Indonesian military officers on the scene, has been to get the Chinese to vacate the upriver villages where they have been settled for hundreds of years.

The Dyak killing spree has resulted in the first outbreak of head-hunting in the island since 1945, when the allies paid for Japanese heads. Eyewitnesses report that the Dyaks are disembowelling their victims and eating their livers. Entire villages have been put to the torch in the western portion of Indonesian Borneo just below the Sarawak border. Men have been slaughtered and terrified men and women have abandoned their belongings and fled before roving bands of Dyak killers and looters.

The Dyaks and Chinese had a mutually beneficial relationship for many years — the Dyaks sold their crops to the Chinese, who ferried them down river to be sold at a profit.

This relationship worked well — until the Indonesian Army moved in, ostensibly to liquidate the remnants of guerrilla bands dating back to Sukarno's confrontation against Malaysia between 1963 and 1965, for which Borneo served as the main theatre.

These guerrillas, almost entirely Chinese in composition, were recruited by former foreign minister Subandrio's imitation of the Central Intelligence Agency, the BPI.

Once hailed by the Indonesians as the future popular liberators of "neo-colonialist" Sarawak, these hapless irregulars have become fugitives from both Malaysia and Indonesia, eking out an existence for the last two years in the thick jungle on the Indonesian side of the border.

The Indonesian government knew of their existence and in fact estimated their hard-core strength at 700 men, still carrying the arms they had been furnished by the BPI. But it did not regard them as a source of trouble until last summer when, according to the government account, they trooped out of the rain forest and looted an arsenal at an Indonesian Air Force landing field, making off with some 200 weapons and ammunition.

The government moved in a battalion of veteran Siliwangi Division troops plus a newly formed battalion of paracommandos for whom the jungle fighting in prospect would make excellent combat training.

The next thing that happened, so far as is known here from the incomplete accounts made public by the government, was the sudden killing of a number of Dyak chiefs. No one has proof of who did it, amid all the contradictory rumors, but the strong suspicion is that the army was responsible.

The murders set off a predictable wave of fury among the Dyaks. They proclaimed a state of war against the persons they believed were responsible, the guerrillas on Oct. 13. The war declaration, solemnized by a blood rite, received great publicity in Jakarta.

For the Dyaks, the guerrillas meant Chinese.

Visitors to West Borneo have seen few young men either in the looted villages or in the burgeoning refugee colonies along the coast, leading them to believe they have gone to join the guerrillas. Army officers now estimate the small hard core of guerrillas have the support of anywhere from 10 to 30 times their number of fugitives in the jungle.

The Indonesian Army alleges that the Dyaks are acting completely on their own, and it is indeed likely they got beyond anybody's control after the murders of their chiefs. But the behavior of the troops in the looted villages, where they apparently made no effort to halt the killing, indicates to observers that the army was at least a passive accomplice.

Trudeau on Parliament Vote:

Definite Yes Forecast For Code Reforms

OTTAWA (CP) — Faint dawn of a series of basic reforms of the Criminal Code appears to bear out Justice Minister Trudeau's assertion that the overhaul will win overwhelming parliamentary approval.

Although few have had a chance to digest fully the 104-clause bill given first reading in the Commons Thursday, initial reactions Friday appeared favorable.

The omnibus legislation would authorize therapeutic abortion, allow homosexual acts between consenting adults in private, and make lotteries legislation more liberal.

CRACK DOWN

It would crack down harder on impaired driving, possession of weapons, forging of passports, cruelty to animals and use of the telephone to harass. In a centennial Parliament that already has started action to widen the grounds for divorce and to limit capital punishment, the omnibus bill remains a stunner.

Former Justice Minister David Fulton said in an interview it could not have been introduced five years ago without creating harmful party divisions.

NEW LAW

Fulton (PC-Kamloops) said it reflects advances in social thinking and the development of a popular consensus in Canada on such matters as abortion.

The new law would allow abortions where a hospital committee certifies that a pregnancy endangers the life or health of a mother.

The Criminal Code is ambiguous on this subject now, one section allowing abortion to save a life and another making it an offence to carry out an abortion.

LEGAL OR NOT

Several Roman Catholic hospitals said they won't perform abortions, legal or not. But there was no official opposition to the proposed law from the church.

Anglican and United Church spokesmen supported the change.

Rev. J. M. Taylor, a United Church minister in East Burnaby, B.C., said it does not go far enough and would do little to cut down illegal abortions.

NAMES COLLECTED

In Toronto, Olive Heron, president of the Emergency Committee for the Defense of Unborn Children, said 10,000 names have been collected to fight the abortion law.

The homosexuality changes were welcomed by many mental health experts. Vancouver City Prosecutor Stewart McMorran said they are long overdue, but "it is just a further drop in the general community standards of morality."

"The state has no business in the bedrooms of the nation," Trudeau said Thursday in commenting on the changes.

BLOOD READING

Another major change—to make breath analysis tests mandatory for drivers suspected of impairment—was hailed despite some criticism of the impairment level.

It would make a blood alcohol reading of .10 per cent or higher solid evidence of impairment. The Canadian Highway Safety Council said it had hoped for a level of .08 per cent.

A similar law which went into effect Oct. 9 in Britain cut the number of fatal or injury-producing traffic accidents in the London area by 42 per cent in a month, the council said.

RAPID APPROVAL

Applied to Canada, this would have meant 1,787 fewer traffic deaths in 1966 and 67,000 fewer Canadians injured.

Ottawa Preparing False-Ad Thrust

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal authorities are preparing to strike at false advertising.

Power to act in this area, now reserved to the provinces, would be handed to the new consumer and corporate affairs department by one of the Criminal Code amendments introduced in the Commons Thursday.

"The provinces have never used this much," says D. H. W. Henry, director of investigation and research under the Combines Investigation Act. "We're prepared to enforce it."

The power now lies in a clause of the Criminal Code which is provincially enforced. By transferring the clause to the Combines Investigation Act, it comes under federal authority.

The authority will be the

Prisoner Release

Change Puts Onus On Parole Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Parole Board will be required, under proposed changes in Canadian criminal law, to consider the risk to society before releasing any prisoner on parole.

Amendments to the Parole Act are included in an intensive list of reforms put before the House of Commons by Justice Minister Trudeau Thursday.

The bill was given first reading and will be debated when Parliament resumes its session Jan. 22 after the Christmas recess.

The bill would maintain the authority of the parole board to grant parole on any conditions it considers desirable, but the board would be required to ask itself whether the release of the inmate on parole would not constitute an undue risk to society.

The board would be authorized to grant discharge from parole to any parolee except one who sentenced to death or to a maximum punishment of life imprisonment. It would be prevented from revoking the parole of somebody already granted a discharge.

It could revoke parole in the case of a prisoner whose parole had been suspended but whose prison term expired before the circumstances surrounding the suspension were cleared up.

Under the present law, a court is generally unable to put an offender on probation if he has more than one previous conviction. The government intends to remove this restriction.

Courts would also be authorized to issue a probation order in all cases where the accused is fined or sentenced to prison, provided that the prison sentence does not exceed two years. If the accused were sent to prison term expired.

Other amendments would permit the courts to change the conditions of probation orders and to allow a person on probation to move from one province to another.

The revised law would make disobeying probation terms an offence in itself, punishable on summary conviction. Under the present law, the only effective sanction is to make the offender serve the full sentence for the offence of which he was convicted in the first place.

OTTAWA (CP) — Three of 13 staff members of the royal commission on the status of women have resigned in the last two months and informants say there is rising tension and declining morale among others on the staff.

At the end of October the royal commission consisted of seven commissioners—two of them men—and a staff of two senior officers and 11 professional people.

PERSONAL REASONS

Since then, commissioner Donald Gordon, one senior officer and two professional staff members have arranged to leave for personal reasons. They are Dr. David Kirk of Waterloo, Mrs. Frank Came and Mrs. George Hyma, both of Ottawa.

Chairman Anne Francis, while refusing to talk about internal matters, denies there is discord.

"I have not the slightest doubt that we will get an extremely good report and I'm very confident that all is well in the commission," she said.

NOT UNUSUAL

She did not find anything unusual in the two professional staff resignations but said she did not know why Gordon had resigned.

Reliable informants, however, say an atmosphere of secrecy and distrust has fallen over the commission and that most of its activities are not officially reported to the staff.

COMMISSION'S DUTY

The commission, announced by Prime Minister Pearson in the Commons last Feb. 3, is to investigate into and report on the status of women in Canada.

It is to recommend what steps the federal government might take to ensure their equality with men in all aspects of Canadian life.

Miss Francis, 59, was appointed chairman Feb. 3. In private life Mrs. John Bird, she is a free lance broadcaster specializing in international affairs.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS

Staff appointments April 10 were: Monique Begin, a Montreal sociologist, as executive secretary; Dr. Kirk, University of Waterloo sociology professor, as research director; and Mark McClung, a federal civil servant in Ottawa, as assistant director of research and special assistant to the chairman.

Miss Begin is the only remaining senior staff officer. McClung — youngest son of Nellie McClung, well-known Canadian writer and champion of women's rights—joined the commission on a temporary basis because of his interest in its work.

WALKED OUT

He returned to the secretary of state's department Oct. 15. Shortly after, on Nov. 1, Gordon, a political science professor at the University of Waterloo, resigned after walking out of an informal gathering of commissioners.

The resignation was not made public for three weeks, and Miss Francis said at that time it was because nobody had asked her about it.

In that same interview she said the commissioners had decided there should be "one voice" for commission and that commission staff had been directed not to give information to the press.

She said then that Dr. Kirk had returned to the University of Waterloo to do research on his own for the commission. Miss Francis said Thursday she does not know what Dr. Kirk is currently doing. She refused to say whether he was still working for the commission but said he was no longer research director. The new research director, she said, is Miss Begin.

RESEARCH POST

An informant said after relinquishing the post of research director, Dr. Kirk arranged to do commission research by contract. Later he was given 40 days' notice to leave the commission Jan. 10, although his original appointment had been for the duration of the commission, expected to be 2½ years.

The two other resignations were both of women.

ONE OF FIRST

Public relations officer Mrs. Frank Came resigned in November after a five-month stint. A young lawyer, Mrs. George Hyma, one of the first staff members hired, has also resigned and is to leave the commission Dec. 31.

The Pill Not in New Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — One key area not mentioned in the omnibus bill revising the Criminal Code is birth control because a separate bill already is making its way through Parliament.

The omnibus changes introduced Thursday by Justice Minister Trudeau cover a wide and related range of areas such as sexual practice and abortion.

A separate bill that in effect repeals the Criminal Code prohibition on the sale and advertising of contraceptives was introduced in the Senate weeks ago. It has received second reading there and has been referred to a committee for detailed study.

The Criminal Code section making the sale or advertising of contraceptives an offence "tending to corrupt morals" has discouraged easy access to information about birth control, although contraceptives may be had at almost any drug store and have been distributed to servicemen by the armed forces.

The Senate bill would place contraceptives under the Food and Drug Act, allowing the federal health minister to make regulations on their sale and advertising.

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (UPI) — A massive military relief operation moved to the western section of the 25,000 square mile Navajo reservation Friday, where an estimated 40,000 Indians still were stranded by snow-clogged roads and towering snowdrifts.

An eight-day storm dumped three feet of snow on the sprawling reservation, cutting off all surface transportation and leaving the Indians stuck without supplies.

Relief Increased for Stranded Navajos

The storm has caused at least eight deaths. Included among the victims were four babies and an elderly shepherd. Three men were found dead Thursday. Authorities said they died of exposure.

Disease has also taken its toll of the Indians. Public health service hospitals on the reservation are filled almost to capacity with persons suffering from pneumonia or severe colds. Several cases of frostbite have also been reported.

Military craft have dropped tons of food and medicine to the Indians and hay for their starving livestock. Planes dropped 130 tons of hay Thursday and hoped to double the amount Friday.

A half-dozen military helicopters, including a giant Chinook capable of carrying 60 passengers, set up base in Tuba City, close to the still stranded western portions of the reservation.

Pius XII Chose To Stay

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius XII feared in 1941 that the Nazis and the Fascists planned to send him into exile or put him under confinement, newly-published Vatican documents have disclosed.

Reports that Germany planned to ask Italy to force Pius to leave Italy or isolate him in the Vatican were relayed to the pontiff in 1941, it was reported.

Private notes by the then secretary of state, Luigi Cardinal Maglione, said Pius reacted by stating his decision "to suffer everything rather than abandon Rome and the Vatican."

This document was among 433 making up the fourth volume in the two-year-old Vatican series on Pius XII, the Vatican and the Second World War.

The fourth volume also discloses the Vatican tried to mediate a separate peace between Britain and Italy in 1940. Italy refused.

World Church Roundup

U.S. Bishop Resigns

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The bishop of the far-flung Byzantine Catholic diocese of Pittsburgh, opposed by conservative priests, has resigned his post after living in what he called his exile in Rome.

A brief announcement by the Vatican Friday gave no reason for the resignation of Most Rev. Nicholas T. Elko, Roman Catholic Ruthenian-rite bishop of Pittsburgh.

YEAR-LONG It added to the mystery surrounding his year-long absence from the diocese, stretching from Pittsburgh to Alaska with 120 parishes and 220,000 parishioners.

Pope Paul elevated Bishop Elko to titular archbishop of Bara and ordaining prelate of the Byzantine rite in Rome, replacing him in Pittsburgh with Most Rev. Stefan Kocisko, Ruthenian bishop of Passaic, N.J.

SOME BEEFS Bishop Elko, 58, was called to Rome Dec. 9, 1966, following complaints by 35 of his 148 Byzantine priests. They were reported to have objected to his attempts to liberalize the traditions of the Eastern-rite church. The Ruthenian-rite is one of 17 semi-autonomous branches of Roman Catholicism which recognize the Pope as head of the church but have their own non-Latin customs and liturgies. The church has never given a public explanation of the charges against Bishop Elko.

MONTREAL (CP) — Leaders among Roman Catholic clergy in 20 Montreal-archdiocese pastoral zones have told ecclesiastical officials in Ottawa what kind of archbishop they want as successor to Cardinal Leger, in Africa to help lepers.

They suggested a young man who can work well with clergy and laymen acting as a team, a man who can "involve himself even if he runs his pastorate in a different style," and one appointed for only a 10-year term.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Cardinal Leger has been praised by the Pope for his decision to resign as Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal to work among African lepers. In a Christmas message to cardinals the Pope praised Leger's "exemplary abnegation."

MONTREAL (CP) — Roman Catholics in the Montreal archdiocese will not be obliged to attend mass Saturday, Jan. 6, the Feast of the Epiphany, Rev. Paul Gregoire, apostolic administrator of Montreal, said the decision is part of a wider plan to revise the Church's policy on the obligation to attend mass on some Holy Days when these fall on a weekday.

LAGOS (Reuters) — Roman Catholic and Anglican church leaders here are reported pressing the federal government to agree to a Christmas or New Year's halt in the Nigerian civil war now in its sixth month.

Rowell

Christmas Record 40 in Row

For the 40th consecutive year Dr. J. B. Rowell pastor emeritus, will conduct Christmas service at Central Baptist Church.

His sermons Sunday and Christmas Day will be given under the general title Babe of Bethlehem. At 11 a.m. Sunday he will discuss the subject, God Was in Christ; at 7 p.m. Jehovah Sabaoth-Saviour.

At a special service between 11 a.m. and noon Christmas Day he will speak on Hallelujah.

Weather Delays Arrival

Friends Say Farewell to Priest

Despite the fact that he arrived an hour late for his farewell reception, Father Jan Planeta was given warm greetings by his bishop, fellow priests and parishioners of Sacred Heart in the church hall last Sunday.

The delay was due to poor weather conditions on the Malahat highway which Father Planeta had to travel from his new parish in Parkville-Quilcum.

"It is a unique sacrifice that a priest makes, in that he does not set out roots when he takes up residence in a parish. In this way he is better able to fulfil his ministry," Bishop de Roo told the gathering.

"We must move these good men about for the sake of the diocese as a whole," continued the bishop. Although Father Planeta had not set out roots, it was obvious he had found his way to the hearts of 200 men, women and children gathered in the church hall.

Father Planeta had been serving at Sacred Heart since May 1955, his longest stay in one place since leaving Poland, his homeland, for Germany.

That was when the Nazi Gestapo caught him teaching children about God and interned him on Oct. 16, 1939.

He was liberated from Dachau, Germany, in April 1945, but remained in the country to be with Polish troops. He was in a transmigration camp until January 1950. When he came directly to Victoria.

GREAT LOVE Although atrocities, along with hunger and extremes of temperature were common in concentration camps, Father Planeta appeared to bear only sympathy for his tormentors. It is perhaps this great love for his fellow men that has so endeared him to his community.

When he asked his parishioners to open their home to Hungarian refugees in late 1956, when he suggested they help Indian students find homes, and when he instigated a weekly Sunday collection for the poor and starving of India, parishioners responded warmly.

SHORT ADDRESS At the farewell reception, Roger Weicker, chairman of the Men's Club, opened ceremonies with a short address and introductions of those who gave gifts. R. Finegan acted for the PTO; Master Kevin Carson for youth; and Ken Brown for the men's club after which Mr. Weicker presented a purse from the parish.

The Polish choir, led by Father Kwarta, rendered two songs of farewell. Bishop de Roo addressed the gathering, expressing regret, yet pleasure, that Father Planeta would be moving on to continue his work.

Fishermen Lost

SEOUL (AP) — Six South Korean fishermen are feared drowned after a 1,500-ton North Korean warship rammed their eight-ton fishing vessel, police reported.

Ten Children Baptized In Jordan River Rites

Ten children between the ages of six months and seven years received the sacrament of baptism last Sunday at a service in Jordan River Community Hall.

Rev. D. J. Gillies of Knox Presbyterian Church in Sooke went to Jordan River for the afternoon service, accompanied by two elders, Mrs. Edith MacLeod and Mrs. Mary Cotterill.

Mr. Gillies baptized Paula and Paulette, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Park; Marjorie, Susan, Rhonda and Wayne, children of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Gromoz; Sherry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Smith; Sandra and Donald, children of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Glebe; Lorne, son of Mrs. Elmer Dodds.

SOCIAL HOUR Mrs. Dorothy Bower, pianist, played for the service and a social hour followed.

Knox Sunday school had its Christmas party last Sunday evening in the church. Rev. Leonard Simcoe of the teaching staff opened the program with scriptural reading and Frank Richardson was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Florence Acreman was organist.

A program of band selections, recitations and songs by vocal groups was given.

SERMON TOPIC Mr. Gillies will conduct the Christmas service at 11 a.m. Sunday in the church. Putting Christ into Christmas is his sermon topic.

There will be a carol service at 7 p.m. Mrs. Kenneth Shepherd, contralto, will sing a solo. M. P. Gibson will be at the organ.

The Sunday School has recessed for the holidays and children will attend the church services.

Recital

Although he's only 13 years of age, Bruce Bengston has for two years been salaried organist of Central Lutheran Church in Salem, Ore. A Grade 9 student in Salem, he will be heard in recital here at 8 p.m. Wednesday, playing the Hill, Norman and Beard organ in Christ Church Cathedral.

Spirits Undampened

Despite rain, turnout Friday was good for Christmas carol singalong at Centennial Square. About 250 high school students provided music while cheer leaders and girls from Y Teens service club handed out carol sheets to passing public for two-hour program. Mayor Stephen attended.—(Jim Ryan)

The families, who have from one child to 15, were found by the Salvation Army and the St. Vincent De Paul organization. They will also carry gifts for all pre-teen children in the families.

City Mother Testifies Son at Home in Bed

Magistrate William Ostler has reserved judgment to Dec. 29 in the trial of Herbert Newton and Rodney Leason who are charged with breaking into the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

The Crown closed its case against Newton, 2676 Foul Bay, and Leason, 501 Niagara, in central magistrate's court Friday morning.

The pair is charged with the Nov. 15 break-in of the centre in which about 20 offices were forced open and two safes attacked.

DEFENCE WITNESS

Defence counsel Derrin Owen-Flood called Mrs. Caroline Leason, mother of the accused Rodney Leason, who testified to seeing her son in bed at their home during the night and morning of Nov. 14 and 15.

Shopper Stabbed

Mother Meets Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Christmas shopping trip has ended in violent death for a North Vancouver mother of three children.

The body of Mrs. Rose Vollet, 41, was found Friday in bushland at Britannia Beach, a desolate community 30 miles north of Vancouver. She had been stabbed to death.

The body was found by Sgt. Ray Nelson of the North Vancouver RCMP and Det. Sgt. Gerald Ripka, attached to the sheriff's office of Marion County, Ore. They were accompanied by a 19-year-old man, one of three persons picked up by police in Oregon after they had traded in Mrs. Vollet's car at Woodburn, Ore.

Girl, Too

Two young men, 19 and 20, were held for questioning, along with a 16-year-old girl.

Three people were arrested Thursday night in Corvallis, Ore., and turned over to Marion County, Ore., authorities on a warrant charging them with unlawful use of a vehicle.

Mrs. Vollet disappeared on a Christmas shopping trip after taking her husband to work Tuesday in the family station wagon. He is a fireman in North Vancouver, father of three children ranging in ages from 7 to 13.

A station wagon was traded for a 1959 sports car by three young people, at Woodburn, Ore., service station, 30 miles south of Portland, said Corvallis police chief James Goodwin.

In Accident

Mr. Vollet was telephoned Thursday by police in Oregon and told that his wife's car had been traded for another in Woodburn.

The sports car was driven to Corvallis where it was involved in a minor accident, police said. After checking it out, police noted a warrant had been issued for the driver and occupants of the car.

James Sims, 19, Isaac Darryl Frank, 20, and a 16-year-old girl, were charged with unlawful use of a vehicle. Bail was set at $5,000 each. The two men were transferred to North Vancouver, pending additional charges.

Radio Repair

RCMP investigators said the car was brought to an east end Vancouver radio repair shop about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday by a teenage youth, for repairs to the radio.

RCMP said the description of the youth given by the radio repair man matched that of one of the youths arrested in Oregon.

The Vollet children include Denise, 13, Gary, 12, and Greg, 7.

'BOUGHT NOTHING'
Mrs. Leason also testified she went to Capital Iron store Nov. 13 with her son and Newton. She said her son bought nothing.

Earlier, Alice Byrne, a cashier at Capital Iron, identified Leason as the person who bought a length of rope later found dangling through a broken window at the centre.

Det. John Mason, a Crown witness, was recalled by the defence. He said he showed Miss Byrne 11 photographs Nov. 16 and asked her if she could identify the person who bought the rope.

"She said she thought it was Leason who bought the rope but she wasn't certain," Det. Mason said.

Eight Years of TNT

'Phantom' Finally Derailed

HAMBURG (Reuters) — "Phantom Roy Clark," the railway bomber who played a cat-and-mouse game with West German police for eight years, is finally in custody.

Police who arrested him Thursday night said he graciously conceded after years of taunting: "Gentlemen, you have done it."

The self-styled phantom, whom police named as 40-year-old stateless truck driver Alexander Hembluck, is to appear before a magistrate for a normal arrest warrant to be issued.

"Phantom Roy Clark" who took his name from a character in a popular German detective novel, was responsible for several small explosions on railway property in the Hamburg and Bremen area.

Earlier this year, "Phantom Fever" swept northern West Germany as the bomber stepped up his threats of explosions. Recently he demanded sums ranging up to $150,000 not to blow up the railway stations of Hamburg and Bremen.

Televised police appeals for information turned up several publicity-seekers.

A police patrol finally picked up the bomber's trail by chance Dec. 17. They saw a truck driver acting suspiciously near a road sign, to which was attached one of the phantom's ungrammatical and crudely scribbled notes.

The driver was later traced to his apartment at Alkenbruch where police took Hembluck into custody after finding two pounds of TNT, the explosive used in the phantom's home-made bombs.

Tippy Tree Light Imperils Church

A floodlight used to illuminate a Christmas tree in the First Baptist Church, 1600 Quadra, tipped over Friday and burned through the floor.

The church's caretaker noticed the burning at 10 a.m. Friday and the fire was doused before any serious damage was caused.

But Carl Coates, deputy chief of the Victoria Fire Department, said: "It could have been very serious."

He warned people to watch Christmas lighting in their homes for any similar occurrences.

Bandit Vow Has Short Life

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Daoust, 25, who once vowed he would never be taken alive, was sentenced Thursday to a total of 150 years in prison. The sentences are to run concurrently and he is to serve 30 years.

He had pleaded guilty to 30 charges including armed robberies, which got him a total of about $100,000 in 1965 and 1966, and several escapes from police custody.

Daoust was sentenced earlier to 30 years in prison for various crimes but the previous sentence is to be served concurrently with those imposed Thursday.

Union Oil Company of Canada is a little more than just those orange 76 globes

Union Oil Company of Canada is a fully-integrated petroleum company engaged in exploration, production, refining, and marketing. But to most British Columbians, we're probably best known as that growing chain of Union 76 Service stations . . . with those orange 76 globes out front.

For many years we have been at work in an active program of exploration and production that extends across the northland of B.C. and several other Provinces. A pipeline carrying crude oil from our own fields in the Fort St. John area passes within five miles of Prince George and we have tapped that for our needs.

The recent opening of our refinery at Prince George and Union Oil Company's entry into the marketing of gasoline and other petroleum products completed the cycle from oil well to you, the consumer.

Union Oil has now opened — and has in advanced planning stages — a number of strategically located marketing centres and service stations throughout B.C., each designed to bring a new meaning in personalized service to residents of the communities we serve. At these UNION 76 SERVICE centres we offer such sophisticated products as the famous Union 76 family of gasolines, and Royal Triton . . . the amazing purple motor oil.

Already we are open and serving in Victoria, Vernon, Clinton and Fort St. John. Soon you'll find us in Prince George, Whalley, Kamloops, Quesnel, Cache Creek, Williams Lake and Vancouver . . . and eventually in other B.C. centres.

So you can see we are a little more than those orange 76 globes atop our present stations. We're a Canadian Company serving this Province in a number of ways and we're looking forward to making your acquaintance.

Our objective is simple: to provide the finest values in products and services as a guarantee of the pledge that at the sign of the 76 . . . powerful gasoline is only the beginning.

Economic Barometer

Hot in Victoria Area

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

This year has already been proclaimed as Victoria's biggest business year, although December figures have yet to be reported.

The Canadian Bankers Association has announced that for the first 11 months of 1967, deposits to individual accounts at the branches of the chartered banks in the Victoria area had risen to $5,500,000.

It was the first time that the $5,000,000 mark had been reached in any year, and as the December figures come in it is expected the new-year record will be close to $6,000,000.

This compares with $4,200,000 in 1966, and is getting near to double the 1963 total of $3,389,600.

The November debits were in line with those in earlier months — well ahead of a year ago. CBA reported them at $589,700, or more than 50 per cent above the $386,000 total in November, 1966.

The bank debits are regarded as a good barometer of trading and economic conditions in the area.

Neon Takes A New Leap At Vancouver

VANCOUVER — The outstanding performer in a short pre-Christmas season was Neon Products which rose to a new high of 14 and closed at 13 1/2 for a gain on the day of 1.50. Control of the company changed hands a few weeks ago with the controlling block being sold at 10 1/2.

Shares were mixed. Lorne and Brenda each added 10 but Beddison was off .35 at 7.15 and Peter Silver lost .11 at 1.70. Rodstrom led in activity but closed unchanged at .85.

Denison Strong

TORONTO (CP) — The Exchange took a half-day holiday closing at noon, and prices rose in moderate trading.

He's a Smoothie Gets Top Weight

TORONTO (CP) — Already a horse of the year in Canada for 1967, He's a Smoothie had more honors heaped on him Friday when the annual Canadian free handicap weights were released.

The four-year-old colt, owned by Bill Beasley of Toronto, was assigned high weight in both the older-horse and grass-horse divisions.

HANDICAP SYSTEM

The weights are assigned annually, based on a hypothetical race over 1.16 miles, and represent the impact necessary to make the race equal for all horses. Horses of greater ability are assigned higher weights than those of lesser ability.

Bill Dilling, Jockey Club racing secretary assigned He's a Smoothie 122 pounds in the older-horse division and 126 pounds for a hypothetical grass race.

Dilling assigned Pine Point, owned by Saul Wagner of Toronto, 126 pounds in the three-year-old division and Dancer's Image 123 pounds as the top-rated two-year-old.

Dancer's Image, a grey son of the late Native Dancer, is owned by Peter Fuller of Boston. Arctic Blizzard, the top Canadian-bred of 1967, was assigned third high weight of 120 pounds, two fewer than Gadget Man.

Arctic Blizzard is co-owned by Mrs. William Seitz of Montreal and Mrs. Vincent Reid of Toronto.

Ingemar Helps Swedish Police

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (Reuters) — Ingemar Johansson, former world heavyweight boxing champion who went to the aid of police against anti-Vietnam war demonstrators, said Friday night "police are too soft on those types in this country."

Police said Johansson helped two policemen against a mob of pro-Viet Cong demonstrators in his home town of Gothenburg Wednesday night.

Johansson said he was coming out of a restaurant when he saw the brawl and decided to give a hand.

"I don't know enough about Vietnam to hold an opinion but I know a loudmouth when I see one," he said.

Johansson said he waved his arms about, but denied hitting anybody. However, one demonstrator claimed he was knocked groggy and lodged a complaint against Johansson for assault.

Police were investigating the complaint.

American League Records Toppled

BOSTON (AP) — The American League had a record year in 1967.

Official figures announced by league president Joe Cronin Friday showed 24 major league records and 23 league marks were broken this year.

In addition, the league's 10 clubs helped tie the 19 major league and 12 league marks.

AVERAGES LOW

The 10 teams had an all-time low batting average of .236, shattering the record of .239 by both the American and National Leagues in 1908.

As expected, Carl Yastrzemski, the Boston Red Sox triple crown winner and the league's most valuable player, led the circuit with a slugging mark of .622 on 360 total bases in 579 official times at bat.

Baltimore Orioles Frank Robinson, the 1966 slugging champion, was runner-up with .576.

Fabulous Haig Is 75

Charming, Witty and Brash

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Don't hurry. Don't worry. You pass this way only once. Don't forget to stop and smell the roses."

Who said it? Confucius? Dr. Norman Vincent Peale? Gandhi?

No, 'twas Walter Hagan, the fabulous Haig, king of the tournament golf pros in the Golden Twenties, father of the current pro tour and all-time

PGA match champion who was 75 Friday.

There are more thorns than roses in Hagan's life now but the colorful, flamboyant old fairway psychologist refuses to concede it. A series of throat operations has taken away his voice. He sticks a cane to his chest in Traverse City, Mich., but his sophisticated last for sports and living carry on.

Hagan was the greatest of the match-play champions. He

Nats Manage 1-1 Tie With Classy Russians

If the Russian national hockey team is two goals better than Moscow Selects, a rating given by Father David Bauer, advisor to the Canadian national team, Canada's hope of an Olympic championship in Grenoble next March is a slim one based on what happened last night at Memorial Arena.

The Canadian team the No. 1 group based in Winnipeg did manage a 1-1 tie with the team rated No. 2 in Russia but it was outplayed most of the way in the rugged game before 3,965 fans.

MADE FEWER ERRORS

Selects, who included seven former members of the Russian national team in a group which included three defencemen who will almost certainly be with the Russian team in Grenoble, were better positionally, made fewer mistakes and could have won handily but for a lack of finish and the steady play of goalie Ken Broderick, who did exceptionally well to block 28 out of 29 shots sent his way.

Big, fast and quite able to hold their own in the rougher style of hockey played here, the Russians had a solid defence led by Viktor Kuznetsov, Valentin Markov and Vladimir Brezhev, all of whom have played with the Russian national team and who are likely to be back with the big team in Grenoble.

GOING BOTH WAYS

Viktor Tolmachev left nothing to be desired in goal and the Russians led, by Vladimir Yurinov (No. 13), a big fellow who centred the best line on the ice, had all their forwards going both ways.

It can, however, be said that the fans did not get to see the Canadian team at its best. It was missing defencemen Barry MacKenzie and forward Bill MacMillan, two strong regulars out with leg hurts, and it is just beginning the training program that should make it a far more fit team at Grenoble than it was last night.

Roger Bourbonnais was playing his first game of the season with the national team and Ryan Huck arrived less than two hours before game time after writing a morning examination in Winnipeg.

CAN BE BETTER

Although they played a bad first period and were fortunate to escape no worse than 1-0 and had the puck bounce just right for them on the unexpected tying goal midway through the third period, the Nationals showed in Russia that they can get more direction to their decision than they did last night.

Their finest moment came late in the third period when Steve Monteith and Ted Hargreaves drew penalties 32 seconds apart and they had to play two men short for 38 seconds.

Boardman, Terry O'Malley and Gary Begg did outstanding turn of penalty-killing for the first minute, then Paul Conlin and Marshall Johnston, who has been converted into a defenceman this season, joined Begg to keep Selects out the rest of the time.

It looked as if it was going to be a rout in the first period. The Nationals were inclined to do too much standing around and with their forwards often caught up ice, Broderick and his defence were under almost constant pressure.

Nationals managed only four on-target shots in the first 20 minutes while Broderick, who had to contend with 14 shots, came up with some fine stops and was lucky once when the puck hit the piping and came to rest only inches from the goal-line.

He finally yielded at 15:12 to Victor Jaroslavlev, who beat him from the right side after getting a two-on-one break when O'Malley got himself trapped when he thought he could get to a loose puck inside the Moscow zone.

Jaroslavlev broke down the wing, used his partner as a decoy and fired from about 25 feet, catching the short side.

It was a better Canadian team that showed up for the second period. The Nationals almost tied the score twice in the first minute managing as many shots on Tolmachev in the first 50 seconds as they did in the first 20 minutes of the game.

They didn't manage to score with the odd man but they looked particularly good in their power-play, which they were able to use five times, as they whipped the puck around in the Russian zone.

They had failed for the fifth time with the odd man when they suddenly came up with the tying goal. The puck caromed around in the Russian zone and Gary Pinder got a quick shot away. It seemed that the puck had gone directly off Pinder's stick just under the crossbar but the goal was credited to Brian Harper, who may have deflected it.

Attendance Down, Bets Up On Racing Tracks of U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — A record $4,900,000 was bet on legalised horse racing in the United States in 1967 although attendance declined.

A year-end survey by The Associated Press showed $2,619,126 bettors wagered $4,923,590,570 on thoroughbred and harness racing combined.

This compares to the 1966 totals of $3,301,000 and $4,554,189,622.

As of Nov. 30, the United States Trotting

Association reported a record $1,690,538,204 bet by 22,000,000 followers of the standard-breds. This compared to last year's figures of $1,490,576,731 by 21,578,444. The mucky sport now goes on virtually all year and the December totals will boost the 1967 figures even higher when they are tabulated.

The harness racing picture was spotty. Roosevelt Raceway at Westbury, N.Y., reported a record betting year of $70,735,623 while Yonkers, N.Y., Raceway had a decline from $220,407,123 to $208,571,777.

Rifles Upset Monarchs Stockers Tie Leaders

Queen's Own Rifles scored three goals in both the first and second periods Friday to upset second-place Tudor Monarchs, 6-3 in Vancouver Island Hockey League action at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The victory moved Rifles to within three points of Tudor and Stockers' North Americans, who moved into a tie for second place by holding league-leading University of Victoria Vikings to a 1-1 tie in the other game.

Both Tudor and Stockers missed a chance to gain at least a tie for first place and now trail Vikings by two points.

Rifles jumped to a 3-1 lead in the first period of the hard-fought, wide-open game and were ahead 6-3 after the second period.

Ted Barnes paced the Rifles with three goals while Don Desjardins added two goals. Mick Brown scored the other goal for the winners.

Dave Giff moved into a tie with Brown for the scoring lead by getting two goals and an assist in a losing cause. Both players have 16 points but Giff leads in goals with 10.

SHARED LEAD BRIEFLY

Ray Gregoire, who handed out some stiff bodychecks throughout the game, and Dave Davidson scored Tudor's other goals.

Stocker had a share of first place for about two minutes in the other game. Larry Myers scored on an individual effort at 14:20 of the second period while teammate Sandy George was in the penalty box.

Pat Herton evened the score at 18:10 and the teams battled through a scoreless third period.

Rich Reward For Winners

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Green Bay Packers clash with the Los Angeles Rams today for the right to represent the Western Conference in the National Football League's championship game.

One of the richest rewards in all professional team sports—a berth in the Super Bowl oppos-

NFL semifinal between Green Bay Packers and Los Angeles Rams can be seen today at 11 a.m. on Channel 3, 6, 7 and 13. The semifinal between Cleveland and Dallas on Sunday starts at 11:30 a.m. on the same channels.

The Jets are at San Diego Sunday. If the Oilers are beaten at Miami and the Jets win, Houston and New York would be deadlocked for the Eastern Division laurels and a playoff would be needed on Dec. 31 to decide Oakland's league title opponent on Jan. 7.

If there is no Houston-New York tie, Oakland would play Houston in California on Dec. 31 for the right to play the NFL champ.

On Sunday, Dallas is host to the Cleveland Browns in a game that will determine the Eastern Conference champion.

It's the American Football League champion goes to the winner.

Drama, Tragedy and Humor Highlight Canadian Racing

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

A young jockey, a horse that died, and a fop-cared filly named Annabelle made Canadian racing, 1967, a scene of drama, tragedy and humor.

The drama belonged to Richard Grubb, 18-year-old apprentice from Ridgeway, Ont.

The tragedy was supplied by Cool Reception, Canada's top two-year-old the previous year, who broke a leg and was destroyed in finishing second in the Belmont Stakes. As for Annabelle, well she had the help of two of the most unlikely owners in racing as she did better on the sports pages than she ever did on the track.

SCHOOL DROP-OUT

Nobody had heard much from Richard Grubb, a young high-school drop-out, until May 16, 1967, almost a year to the day from the time he rode his first winner.

That afternoon, he went out on the first of eight mounts at the plush Woodbine racetrack near Toronto. He ran out of the money.

But for the next seven races, Grubb was first to the wire every time to set a North American riding record. He went on to ride more than 200 winners during the year, a feat worth an estimated $50,000 to the young jock who experts say rides like Avelino Gomez and Willie Shoemaker.

Cool Reception was owned by Mrs. William Setz of Montreal and Mrs. Vincent Reiday of Toronto, daughters of industrialist Leland Mackay, and was considered a sure thing for the Queen's Plate in June.

However, the Belmont came first and Cool Reception went to the post against some of the top horses in the United States.

RAN ON GUTS

He was running smoothly on the rail, in the lead, until Shoemaker moved Damascus quickly on the outside and set the dark bay down for a hard drive through the stretch.

"I felt him faltering at the 16th pole and he was really rumb after the race," said Johnny Sellers who was up on Cool Reception. "Boy, he ran that last 16th on guts."

Sellers didn't even ride him back to the unsaddling area, leaping off and leading the limping horse home.

Cool Reception, finishing with a broken cannon bone in the right foreleg, was second by 2 1/4 lengths in the time of 2:29 2-5—the best Belmont time ever turned in by a Canadian horse.

An operation was performed, but Cool Reception reinjured the leg in his stall and had to be destroyed.

REPRESENTS ALL LOSERS

Annabelle the Wonder Horse was the $1,000 investment of writer Paul Rimstead and photographer Fred Ross of Toronto. They called her a representative of all the losers in the world and she didn't let them down in that respect.

Rimstead and Ross gave her a wild and wonderful party before her first race. They held a "pep" rally at a restaurant the day before the race.

The next day they took over the Fort Erie Arena and flew in a folk singer to lead 300 fans in the song she had written for Annabelle.

Ross and Rimstead rented grey top hats and tails and had the 85-piece Burlington Brass Band lead their wonder horse around the track prior to the first race.

Mayors from eight surrounding communities, an ancient fire truck—it was quite a parade.

Sweet Daddy Sid, a prominent professional wrestler, was Annabelle's bodyguard. Annabelle? Well, she tried, and came eighth in a 10-horse field.

Shortly afterward, following a "financial conference," Rimstead and Ross retired Annabelle with "bucked shins."

"We may be back next year," they threatened.

Still Room for Rinks In Christmas Bonspiel

There is still room for a few more rinks in the seventh annual Christmas bonspiel scheduled at Esquimalt Municipal Centre.

Rinks must include a minimum of one woman curler, who may play at any position. They will play through four events as a Chisholm draw with the first draws on Thursday, Dec. 28 and Friday, Dec. 29 at 5 p.m. There will be continuous curling on Saturday, Dec. 30, until the winners have been decided.

Entries must be sent or brought to Esquimalt Municipal Centre no later than tomorrow night and must be accompanied by at least half of the $24 entry fee.

Oakland Star Tops in AFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Quarterback Dayle Lamonica, who languished for four years on the bench at Buffalo before emerging into a star for Oakland, was named the American Football League's Most Valuable Player Friday by an Associated Press panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Lamonica, rated No. 1 among the AFL's signal callers, held a substantial edge in the voting over two other quarterbacks, New York's Joe Namath and San Diego's John Hadl as well as Houston cornerback Miller Farr.

A graduate of Notre Dame, Lamonica served as backup man for Jack Kemp of Buffalo until the trade last February which sent him to the Raiders.

He responded with a spectacular season, leading the Raiders to their first Western Division title. His 29 touchdown passes led the league and he has gained 3,177 yards through the air, completing 215 of 413 passes for 62.1 per cent.

"I always felt my day was coming," said Lamonica. "I knew I had to serve my apprenticeship. My ultimate goal has always been to be a No. 1 quarterback."

Lamonica was named on 15 of the 27 ballots cast by three-man committees in each of the AFL's nine league cities. He was also chosen quarterback on the All-Star team announced earlier this week.

Lamonica and eight of his Raider mates were named Friday to the West team in the AFL all-star game at the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Florida on Jan. 21.

Couch Lou Saban of Denver who will coach the West will add additional players.

The West All-Stars: Quarterback—Dayle Lamonica; Running back—Ron Mix, San Diego; Fullback—Tommy Agee, Oakland; Tight end—Fred Armstrong, Kansas City; Offensive line—Jim Otto, Oakland; Defensive line—John Hadl, San Diego; Linebacker—Bobby Bell, Kansas City; Cornerback—Sam Williams, Oakland; Safety—John Elway, Denver; Defensive back—Jerry Ricks, Kansas City; and Ken Stabler, Oakland.

The Sweepstakes Program Discontinued

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The Sweepstakes Commission and the New Hampshire Jockey Club announced Friday the $250,000-added New Hampshire Sweepstakes Classic race will be discontinued.

They said future drawings for the Sweepstakes will be matched with regular feature races at Rockingham Park in Salem.

The Sweepstakes program for 1968, the commission said, will remain the same and have four major drawings. There will be more than 300 prizes in each drawing, with top prizes of $100,000, $20,000 and $10,000.

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) —

Nadezhda Chizhova of the Soviet Union bettered the women's world indoor shot putt record Friday with a toss of 58 feet, 7.3 inches.

This best by 4 1/4 inches the record made in 1965 by Tamara Press, also of the Soviet Union.

Equestrian Team Gets Big Boost

TORONTO (CP) — The purchase of two horses may give the Canadian equestrian team a boost for the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico City.

Harry Somrhine announced Thursday he had purchased Darius Elie, world champion Three Day-event horse for $50,000 and Sunview, the third-place finisher, for $20,000 in Ireland.

The horses will be ridden by his nephew, Barry Somrhine, one of Canada's top young riders. Barry placed second in the Eastern Canadian championship Three Day event earlier this year.

Darius Elie, a 10-year-old gelding, was a stadium jumper before being switched to the Three Day event which includes a 25-mile cross-country run, stadium jumping and elementary dressage.

Sunview, a nine-year-old gelding, was third in the world championships at Wembley, England, in 1964 and was voted British Show Horse of the Year.

Rosewall Fails to Show To Help Spain's Netters

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) —

Spain's Davis Cup captain hired Ken Rosewall to help prepare the European squad for the challenge against Australia for the international tennis trophy next week, but the former Australian great failed to appear for Friday's drills.

The Spaniards then recalled Terry Addison, young Australian with a big serve, to work with Manuel Santana. Rosewall was hired especially to provide Santana with a workout against a strong serve.

Jaime Bartoli, Spanish captain, said he had received no explanation from Rosewall.

Spain meets Australia in the challenge round here starting Tuesday.

Professional Fred Stolle, who is practising with the Australian team, predicted a runaway for the home players.

"I expect Australia to win 5-5-4-1 at the very worst. I would give Santana a chance of winning one singles, but that is the most Spain can expect."

Stolle said he thought Santana would have a better chance of winning the singles against Roy Emerson than John Newcombe.

Top Tennis Star Signs Pro Pact

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) —

Cliff Drysdale, South Africa's No. 1 tennis player, has signed a professional contract to join Dave Dixon's $300,000 world championship tennis tour, it was announced Friday night.

The 25-year-old Davis Cup star will be one of the eight players on the new pro championship tour being promoted by Dixon with financial backing from Lamar Hunt.

Dixon said the contract was a long-term agreement, but disclosed no details.

Drysdale was out of action for most of the 1967 season after undergoing surgery. In 1966, he held the No. 7 world ranking and was a semi-finalist at Wimbledon.

Already signed by Dixon for the tour are Dennis Ralston, Butch Borchardt and Pierre Barthes.

"We hope to sign John Newcombe and Tony Roach of Australia after they complete their Davis Cup matches," said Dixon. "And also Roger Taylor of England and Nickie Pili of Yugoslavia."

Dixon said the tour was out of action for most of the 1967 season after undergoing surgery. In 1966, he

Site Picked For Tourney

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — The Professional Golfers Association said Friday its 1969 championship will be played at the National Cash Register Golf Club in Dayton, Ohio. It was one of four sites considered by a PGA inspection team.

PGA President Max Elbin said dates for the 1969 event may be shifted from July to August.

They said future drawings for the Sweepstakes will be matched with regular feature races at Rockingham Park in Salem.

The Sweepstakes program for 1968, the commission said, will remain the same and have four major drawings. There will be more than 300 prizes in each drawing, with top prizes of $100,000, $20,000 and $10,000.

Eagles' Owner Gets Extension

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A

federal bankruptcy referee has given Philadelphia Eagles owner Jerry Wolman more time in which to file a complete schedule of his assets and debts.

On Dec. 13, the federal referee, Joseph O. Kaiser, said

Wolman would have to produce a complete list within 40 days. Thursday's order would allow Wolman an extra 15 days.

The order will allow Wolman additional time to show the location of his estimated $92,000,000 in assets.

Under the reorganizational rules of the federal bankruptcy statute, Wolman also will be required to report more specifically the creditors of an estimated $85,000,000.

Wolman, a 40-year-old financier, also has transportation and real estate investments. He operates his various enterprises out of Silver Spring, Md.

Decorations Theft Runs in Thousands

Lights Go Out on Christmas Spirit

By MARK DICKINSON

Some Victoria residents are thinking twice about the Christmas spirit of giving and receiving — they've been taken.

Thousands of dollars worth of outdoor decorations have been stolen during the past several weeks.

"These punks are just wrecking the Christmas spirit," one irate theft victim declared.

"As fast as we put up decorations to make our homes and neighborhoods beautiful, the sneaky little thieves come along and tear them down."

Mrs. Violet Britton, 3009

Scott, said her home has been raided twice in the past week. As a result she posted on her front lawn a sign that reads:

"Thieves stole all the lower lights — Merry Christmas to All."

She said Friday night she put up the first batch of decorations one week ago.

"A few hours later 75 bulbs were missing," she said. More decorations went up the following day and on Wednesday night thieves made off with another 40 bulbs and an entire electrical string.

Mrs. Britton estimated her loss at $25. "But the real loss cannot be said in dollars and cents," she added.

One home decorator complained that 10 minutes after he had finished putting up his lights a neighbor phoned to say the whole works had been stolen.

And the Shelbourne Street fire hall was struck by thieves less than an hour after the crew posted its Christmas message in lights.

Police, who said they have made no arrests believe the thieves are youths who "just chuck them away or break them."

Thiefs include colored lights, flood lamps, electrical strings, signs and models. A Victoria department store said bulbs usually sell at 16 cents each, strings up to $6 a set, and flood lamps at $5 each.

And so the victims, who have lost a total of several thousand dollars, are left heartbroken, furious and dubious over the Christmas spirit of giving and receiving.

Open Issue

Three Vs. Curtis

By DON GAIN

Three Saanich councillors said Friday there should be more open council meetings in 1968 but Reeve Hugh Curtis countered there has been no significant trend toward handling more business in camera in the last year.

"Closed meetings have been rare," said Coun. Alan Newberry, "but some very crucial matters were discussed at them and I think the meetings should have been open."

"I think Coun. Newberry is looking for a bit of year-end sensationalism," countered the reeve.

OPEN MEETINGS

Coun. William Noel said he believed in more open meetings. "I agree," said Coun. Harold Todd. "I think all meetings should be open except when something of an intimate nature, such as a welfare case or the buying of land is involved."

Reeve Curtis said he subscribed to the open-meeting policy. "And the record shows that most of the public's business is and has been done in public," he added.

NOT IN FACT

"I don't think the observations of these councillors are really founded in fact."

The reeve said he has no regrets about the amount of business done in public this year and in past years.

Coun. Leslie Passmore said he felt that all the closed meetings in 1967 were held in the best interests of the municipality.

UNAVAILABLE

Unavailable for comment were Councillors Edith Gunning, William Campbell, Ed Lum and Foster Isherwood.

Coun. Passmore said he didn't think council had held closed meetings on any matters which should have been made public at the time. All the councillors agreed there were times when meetings should be closed, such as during personnel discussions or when being briefed by the municipality's solicitor.

Pauline Hartman and chef Eddie Suech serve guests

Faith Staple Item In Her Kitchen

Free Food Ready For All

There's a Luxembourg chef in Victoria cooking stew for free distribution to anyone in need.

Eddie Suech arrived in Victoria a week ago like the answer to a prayer.

Mrs. Pauline Hartman, owner of a boarding house at 1003 Vancouver Street, had agreed with Peter Chau and John O'Connor that a place should be opened in Victoria to give hot meals to the needy.

"A week ago I had resigned myself to the fact that I couldn't find anyone who could cook, and I was just going to have to do the cooking myself," commented Mrs. Hartman Friday.

"Then my German Shepherd dog started to have puppies, and as I was acting as midwife, Eddie Suech arrived at the door."

"He came from Luxembourg about 10 years ago, and was in New Brunswick for some time."

Came West

"He decided to come west, but couldn't find work in Vancouver, and came on over to Victoria."

"He wandered into St. Andrew's Cathedral, where he was talking to Father Pierre, who brought him out to me."

"I could hardly believe it when he said he was a chef."

Mrs. Hartman said the dedicated group has enough food on hand for a week, and after that, she is sure something will turn up.

"I've always found that with faith things happen the way they are supposed to happen," she said.

The first meal was served to 10 people Thursday noon.

Good Omen

"I opened the service on the 21st because that is my mother's 73rd birthday. She fed about 20 men a day out of her own farm produce during the Hungry Thirties so it seemed like a good omen."

Mrs. Hartman and her husband Dennis, who works at a plywood mill, have been in Victoria about 25 years.

"I've been running boarding houses for many years," said Mrs. Hartman, "but the people from St. Vincent de Paul often sent men and destitute families to me."

"They did suggest I open my house for needy people, but it wasn't until I'd seen quite a few cases of real need that I agreed."

The house on Vancouver Street does have paying boarders.

Some Pay

"We have some people who pay, and others who pay a good deal more than they have to because they want to help the work we're doing here," said Mrs. Hartman.

"St. Vincent de Paul pays for some people, and the Welfare pays for others, but there are some who just can't pay, and you can't turn them away from the door."

She will take in anyone who needs a bed for a night or two until they can get a job, or for longer periods if necessary.

"One day an Indian woman arrived with three children and another on the way. She stayed with me for about four months, and I became god-mother to the fourth child who was baptized in jail."

Families, Too

A year ago she opened her house officially for the needy. Since then 431 have received food, shelter and sometimes clothing from Hayward House.

"We had several families stay with me since then," she said.

There are single men too, who without money in their pockets or an address could be picked up for vagrancy. The can all find a home at Vancouver Street.

Father Pierre of the Franciscan friary talked to Mrs. Hartman about her idea to provide meals for all, as well as rooms, and brought Peter Chau and John O'Connor, both agricultural department employees along to help her.

"There are so many people in town whose money runs out about the 15th or 30th of the month," said Mrs. Hartman. "They simply have nothing to eat for three or four days."

They Do

"There is so much food in this world I can't see why anyone should have to go hungry, and yet they do, right in this city."

"Even an alcoholic is entitled to a hot meal and a place to sleep, though the misery is of his own making."

"It's pathetic, they have to sleep by the railway tracks or in boxes behind old stores. I don't expect they'll ever stop drinking, but they should have a warm place to go."

"When someone comes here, we don't ask for money, we just try to help."

Church Helper

Mrs. Hartman has been associated with church work at St. Andrew's Cathedral for about 15 years, and was president of the Altar Society at one time.

One of her helpers John O'Connor said he hopes a group will be set up to keep the hot meals program going.

"We didn't go into this thing lightly. We intend to keep it up," he said.

Anyone wishing to assist can receive information by calling Mrs. Hartman 385-9253, Peter Chau 388-4046, or John O'Connor 388-6355.

Civic Day Benefits Federals

Federal civil servants will have the day off on Boxing Day just like their provincial counterparts and most other workers.

A spokesman for the federal civil service commission said employees of the national government are entitled to one civic holiday each year. In B.C. this is Boxing Day.

Provincial government employees will have Tuesday off as will municipal employees.

All retail stores will be closed for the day. So will chartered banks though they will be open from 9 a.m. to noon today.

The recent provincial statutory holiday regulation, however, doesn't provide for Boxing Day as a statutory holiday. This means non-union employees at places which open Boxing Day are not legally entitled to extra pay.

Oarsmen Pass 200 Miles

Stalwart strokesmen of Signal-Hill Chapter of the Order of DeMolay have better than 200 miles behind them in their marathon row in the Gorge.

Rowers are averaging 2.5 miles an hour and so far the journey has taken more than 120,000 strokes of the oars.

The rowers have also picked up a mascot.

CLOSING TIME

"It's a seal," said organizer Doug Peck. "He follows us right up close behind the boat, then flips up in the air and splashes us."

Probably closing time for the merchant-sponsored marathon will be 4 p.m. today at Kinsmen-Gorge Park 100 hours after the start.

Originally the row was to help the 500 fund, but as it is now closed the DeMolays have decided to split the proceeds between an advance for the 500 fund next year and the Good Samaritan Fund of CKDA.

Girl Can Stay at School, Thanks to Yule Bursary

A Vancouver business firm Friday mailed a $240 cheque to the Greater Victoria school board to enable Sharron Ebert, 18, to remain at Oak Bay high school.

Larry Harrison, president of Soli Securities Ltd., said his firm made the gesture as 'a part of Christmas bursary so that Sharron can continue her education.'

Last Monday, the school board decided it could make no exception to a provincial ruling which requires students in public schools pay tuition fees when they attend school in a district other than the one where their parents live.

WITH GRANDPARENTS

Sharron is living with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ebert, 2377 Zala.

Her father recently moved from P.M. Meadows, 15 miles east of Vancouver, to Prince George when seasonal work dropped off and her mother is busy selling the family house and moving.

BY CHRISTMAS

She was told that unless she could raise the $240 fee by Christmas she would have to quit school here.

Ten private offers to raise the money were made to the family but were rejected.

Friday night, Mrs. Cecil Ebert said the family would accept the offer from the Vancouver business firm because "it has not been made by a private individual, and this company frequently makes this sort of bursary."

GRADE 11

Sharron now will stay with her grandparents so she can complete Grade 11, rather than move with her parents to Prince George.

"We are pleased about this," Mrs. Ebert added.

TAKING INTEREST

She said: "We feel that this company and its representatives are taking an interest in a class of student which we feel has been neglected."

through motorists following too closely and not allowing for the slippery streets.

Swathed in Bandages, But Improving

Burned Boy Faces Lonely Holiday

By NANCY BROWN

Christmas Day will be a lonely one for 14-year-old David Doyle, 2780 Millstream, who will spend the holiday as he has spent the past 12 days — swathed in bandages and lying motionless in a hospital bed.

David was severely burned Dec. 11 when a can containing gasoline exploded in his back yard. He will receive numerous skin grafts when he is strong enough.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where he remained in poor condition until Dec. 16, when he started to show gradual improvement.

"He can't move," reported his mother, Mrs. Lorine Doyle, Friday. "He can wiggle his ankles and that's it."

Time passes slowly because his mind is active as only a 14-year-old's can be yet he can't move his head or hold a book to read.

"On Christmas Day the doctor has given permission for one of his friends to visit him for five minutes," said Mrs. Doyle.

"I go to see him as much as possible, read to him, and tell him news of home, but visitors are banned because of the risk of infection."

"He manages to appear cheerful, and he's a great favorite at the nurses' station because they say he's so polite and such a good patient, but today I heard him crying before I went in."

Mrs. Doyle said he has had cards and letters which she takes in and reads to him, then takes back home to put in scrap books for when he's well enough to look at them for himself.

David, she said, enjoys the letters most of all.

"He's always been a bit of a day-dreamer, and I think he might turn out to be a writer," she said.

"The talent runs in the family, so letters which con-jure up pictures for him to keep his mind active and away from the way he feels."

His school-mates at Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School have clubbed together and sent in enough money to rent a television set for a month.

"The principal says he thinks they will make a project of getting it for him in other months, too," said Mrs. Doyle.

"He can't move his head, so the nurses have fixed it up for him to watch television through a mirror."

On Christmas Day Mrs. Doyle plans on taking his gifts and cards in and opening them for him only to see.

"Then I'll take them home until the risk of infection is over and he's allowed to have them."

"I've three other children — two older and one younger so we'll celebrate Christmas, but it won't be the same without David."

"I shall spend as much time as I can with him, as I do every day, but it's very difficult as I don't have a car, and the bus service from Langford isn't very good."

"If anyone wants to send him a card or a letter they will cheer him up a lot," added Mrs. Doyle.

It's Enough to Drive A Machine to Drink

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A merry and mighty day it was for police reporter Jack Dempsey. He took on the new police "Intoximetre" in a test brawl and scored a clean knockout.

Our hero, ever ready to help science, agreed to have a few drinks to check the $95 photo-electric device used to determine whether a suspect has had one or more too many.

The opening round of the nine-hour bout was cautious. Dempsey drank two glasses of beer at a nearby bar. He brought along a can of beer in case he had to wait a bit—and sure enough he did.

But when the States-Item reporter wheezed into the machine, it recorded that he hadn't had a drink in weeks.

Back to the bar. Five strong whiskey highballs. Wheeze. The machine still registered zero. Back to the bar. Eight highballs. Wheeze. Still stone sober, said the machine.

Testing officer Aloysius Habighorst sought out an inmate of the drunk tank whose breath could scale paint at six paces. He agreed to give it a try. A metre reading of 1.5 indicates intoxication. The machine gasped and rang up a swinging 3.0. Habighorst beamed.

"You're just not drunk yet," he told Dempsey. "Go out and have a few more drinks."

Well, sir, several hours and 11 drinks later Dempsey navigated carefully back to the testing room and gave the machine a good wheeze.

Zero. Habighorst sadly packed the machine for shipment back to the factory. Dempsey was poured into a taxi and sent home.

ORENSE, Spain (Reuters) — Fifty-one persons died after drinking liqueurs in which methylated spirit was substituted for alcohol, a court has been told.

The court Thursday night retired to consider its verdict in "the drink of death trial," in which 11 Spanish liqueur manufacturers and retailers were charged with crimes against public health and with rash negligence.

CHIEF ACCUSED

The prosecutor alleged the chief accused, Rogelio Aguilar, bought methylated spirit from a Madrid factory and sold large quantities at cheap rates to Orense liqueur factories.

The court was told 51 persons died and several others were blinded in Spain, the Canary Islands and Morocco during 1962 and 1963 from drinking the liqueurs.

YOUNG WITNESS

One young witness told the court his wife died after drinking from a bottle of liqueur he gave her on their wedding day.

During the trial 11 widows and widowers described the blinding and subsequent deaths of their spouse, and said some first went mad after drinking the poisoned liqueurs.

The accused denied the charges and said they did not know they were using poisonous substances.

On Honeymoon

Dr. and Mrs. Frazer Travel to Hawaii

Dr. and Mrs. Dennis Eric Frazer will honeymoon in Hawaii before returning to Victoria to make their home.

Rev. Alex Calder officiated at their marriage in Oak Bay United Church. The church was decorated with Christmas trees and arrangements of red and white chrysanthemums for the ceremony.

Parents of the bride, the former Denise Cindy Warholm, are Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Warholm, 2511 Cranmore Road. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Frazer of Edmonton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of sorbusa that was fashioned with a bateau neckline, edged in re-embroidered Venetian lace, and sleeves ending in hilly points. A graciously full wattleau train extended from the slim cage gown. A bouffant veil of hand-rolled silk misted from a coronet of dainty stephanotis.

Her all-white bouquet contained gardenias and chrysanthemums. For jewelry, she wore the groom's gift of diamond stud earrings.

Venise lace bordered the high jewel necklines and short cap sleeves of the snow white point d'esprit cage ensembles worn by the bride's four attendants. They carried bouquets of white chrysanthemums and poinsettias and completed their outfits with pearl drop earrings, gifts of the bride.

Miss Penny Warholm was maid of honor for her sister and two other sisters, Miss Kerry Warholm and Mrs. Bryan Baxter were bridesmaid and bridesmatron. Rounding out the quartet of attendants was the groom's sister, Miss Jane Frazer.

Gordon Frazer was best man for his brother and guests were ushered by Jim Hunter, Rodger Stephens and Eugene Vanderhaeghe.

Mr. Baxter proposed the toast to his sister-in-law at the reception which followed in Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Decorations were in a holiday theme and red roses, set in a silver vase, topped the three-tier wedding cake.

As her going-away outfit the bride chose a tux dress, made of silk and wool in a deep purple tone, a black coat, trimmed in fox, and black accessories.

Mrs. V. Carlson came from Regina for the wedding. Other out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. Frazer, Mr. and Mrs. R. Frazer, Mr. and Mrs. D. Frazer, all of Courtenay; Mr. and Mrs. R. Comer of Coquitlam; Miss Susan McKenney, Mr. J. Hunter, Dr. and Mrs. W. Stevens, all of Edmonton; Mr. J. Croshaw and Miss Jill Kennedy, both of Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. D. ## ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: As a freshman at a large university in North Carolina, I have encountered some pretty weird people since I arrived on campus. But I am not especially bothered by them because I expected to run into some oddballs.

My problem is my roommate. Every time I walked into the room, he is there — standing on his head. I have become somewhat accustomed to this sight, although it was not easy. But the annoying thing is that he makes a terrific racket when he falls. When I am studying, these crashing sounds really shake me up. When I am asleep, they awaken me.

The students below us on either side of us have complained, but my roommate says these headstands are vital to his physical well-being. He also insists that they help him think more clearly and that his grades have improved since he started. Well, maybe his grades have improved, but mine have become worse. Please suggest something.—FLUNKIN' FLOYD.

Dear Floyd: Standing on one's head does improve the circulation and many headstanders swear by this exercise. The noise, however, is something else again. Suggest that your roommate put his laundry bag or a mattress or some pillows on the floor and fall on them.

Is he having an affair with the old crow or am I nuts? I've told him how I feel about this "friendship" but he can't seem to stay away from her. What do you think? —SUE.

Dear Sue: I think your boyfriend's attachment to this senior citizen is abnormal and unhealthy. He doesn't sound like very promising marriage material. Doll, in fact the whole thing is like forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: We were married in a private ceremony. Only the immediate families were present.

When we returned from our honeymoon, we received two letters informing us that donations to a cancer foundation had been made in our honor. We have heard of donations in memory of beloved ones who have died, but never have we heard of donations to have newlyweds. It seems somewhat morbid and in poor taste. Please comment. — UNINFORMED.

Dear Uninformed: Donations to commemorate happy events, such as weddings, anniversaries and births are not only proper, they make better sense than an eleventh candy dish or a twelfth pair of booties.

TV TALK

By BRUCE LOWTHER

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Today, the bureau wishes all the merriest of Christmases. First, Friday's fine answer—The 1951 movie A Christmas Carol features Alastair Sim as Scrooge, Mervyn Johns as Cratchit, Hermione Baddeley as his wife, Kathleen Harrison as Scrooge's housekeeper, George Cole as young Scrooge, and Michael Hordern as Marley. They're on Channel 12 at 3:30 p.m. Sunday—see them.

Today's question—A Christmas Carol ends with a great quotation. It starts, "It was always said of him," with 37 words following. The answer will be here Wednesday, but look it up by all means, then look up to it. And take the last five words as my greetings to you.

Watchdog for Giant Oil Rig

Tug Hasn't Anywhere to Go

By MARK DICKINSON

Any sensitive person would say the life led by Capt. George Dobernier and his eight-man crew deserves a sob story.

Twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week, they are cooped up in a vessel that moves constantly but goes nowhere.

And less than half a mile away from them is what any sensitive person could call Heaven, in comparison to the existence on board the ocean-going tug Gulf Jean.

But the tug's skipper, Capt. Dobernier, doesn't complain. The Gulf Jean is stationed the year round at Shell Oil's drilling rig, SEDCO 135-F, 10 miles off Wikanish Bay, near Tofino.

The tug's duties are simply "to stick around the rig in case anything happens," explained Capt. Dobernier.

And as far as the 45-year-old skipper is concerned, that has meant exactly nothing since he took the command last May.

During calm weather the tug is tethered to one of SEDCO's anchor buoys, but during storms she is set free to survive on her own power.

Life on the drilling rig is pretty cushy compared to the existence on board the Gulf Jean.

The 150-foot tug is often battling seas towering anywhere up to 60 feet, and winds that have been known to gust over 100 miles an hour.

And while the tug is plowing through waves that are half as high as she is long, SEDCO 135-F stands like the rock of Gibraltar, her pontoons deep in the sea, and her deck out of the waves' reach.

What does Capt. Dobernier think about this?

"Oh, we get bored around a little, I guess," he said. "But we're all quite comfortable here."

"I guess they (SEDCO's crew) don't get bothered too much in any sort of weather."

The tug's crew is changed every two weeks.

Capt. Dobernier said the only times the Gulf Jean has been called to assist SEDCO have been when he has not been on board. Those calls were to help move the rig to new drilling sites.

"We haven't done anything while I've been around. It's just a matter of being on hand in case anything happened."

He said the tug would be urgently called if a man were to fall off the high decking of SEDCO into the ocean.

What does the tug's crew do with its time?

"We keep the ship clean. Half of us sleep while the other half is on watch. There's always something to do."

What will the men do to celebrate Christmas?

"I guess we'll listen to some carols on the radio. That'll probably be the highlight. There's nothing much else we can do."

"I guess the cook will make something up for us, but I don't know what. He's kept pretty busy nowadays with this heavy weather."

Capt. Dobernier said he had been at sea since 1938, and until 15 years ago, when he moved to the West Coast from the Canadian East Coast, he spent most Christmas Days at sea.

"This is the first time in the past 15 years that I haven't been ashore for Christmas," he said.

Will he miss the bright lights of Christmas tree and the security of terra firma on Monday?

"Oh yeah, I guess so."

The same attitude was expressed by a spokesman on board SEDCO.

"We don't stop work on THIS oil rig just for Christmas."

He said the 45-member drilling crew "will probably celebrate this one next year." As for Christmas dinner on the rig: "We'll have the whole works," he said.

Constant communication is kept between the Gulf Jean and SEDCO through four open radio channels.

Capt. Dobernier said he had been on board the oil rig only once.

"It's usually too sloppy for us to go alongside her."

Arab Ban on Travel Hits Bethlehem Inn

BETHLEHEM (AP) — This year there should be plenty of room at the inn.

So far, Arab innkeepers say, no foreign guests are staying at Bethlehem's five hotels and only a handful have reservations for Christmas.

In Tel Aviv and Jerusalem major hotels are booked solid as pilgrims continue to arrive to celebrate Christmas.

In years past, all 300 hotel rooms here were occupied and the overflow of more than 500 pilgrims had to be put up in the town's schools.

Hotellers explain that their Christmas clientele once consisted mainly of Christian Arabs from Israel and neighboring Arab states.

But so far none of Israel's neighbors is permitting pilgrims to cross into Israeli-held territory to celebrate Christmas. And Israel's Christian Arabs aren't eager to make the pilgrimage this year.

SHOPPING SPREE

Formerly, Israeli Christian Arabs used Christmas as an excuse to visit friends and relatives and to go on a shopping spree in Jordanian shops.

The June war erased the old frontier and Israeli Arabs and Jordanian Arabs on the Israeli-occupied west bank of the River Jordan may visit at will.

Another factor is that Arab guerrilla bands have threatened to cause trouble in occupied Arab territory at Christmas time.

Continued rainy weather plus the need for a pass to get into Bethlehem during Christmas also are slowing the pilgrimage.

Meanwhile, foreign pilgrims continued to arrive at Tel Aviv's Lod Airport.

On Airline Ticket

Canada Backs Fine Print

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to let it intervene in a case hinging on the fine print of an international air line ticket.

The questions the Supreme Court has undertaken to answer is whether an international airline—Alitalia in this case—loses the protection of limited liability provided by international agreements because the notice of that limited liability is deemed too difficult to read on the ticket.

Canada backs Alitalia which was sued following a 1960 crash at Shannon Airport. U.S. district and appeals courts decisions went against it.

The limited liability ceiling at the time of the crash was $8,300 per crash victim. Last year, by international air-carrier agreement, it was increased to $75,000.

The Canadian intervention was presented Thursday here by counsel Robert MacOrate of New York. The court has asked Italy and Britain for their views earlier.

"Canadian air travellers and air carriers, publicly and privately-owned, have a profound interest in retaining the benefits of the Warsaw convention in promoting uniformity in ticketing and in regulating air carrier liability," says the Canadian presentation. "The decisions of the lower courts threaten to destroy this uniformity."

The Warsaw convention in 1927 laid down the original international agreement on liability and other standard practices. The Canadian brief says the interpretations made by the lower courts "could result in absolute and unlimited liability being imposed upon the air carrier without regard to fault."

Labor Planning Special Parley

A special labor conference on injunctions and workmen's compensation will be held in Victoria Jan. 27 and 28, E. T. Staley, B.C. Federation of Labor president, said Monday.

The 200 delegates will discuss injunctions and other labor legislation Saturday and will concentrate on the Workmen's Compensation Act Sunday.

A delegation will visit the Legislative Buildings Monday to discuss problems with the MLAs, and Monday afternoon will discuss wage policies in a closed conference.

The special conference has been called because of the new compensation act, expected to be presented early in the next session of the provincial government.

Libraries Close

Main building, Town and Country and Brentwood branches of the Greater Victoria Public Library will close Christmas, Boxing and New Year's days.

Tips You Off

A friend writes me from Jamaica: "Free port prices, true. But you must shop around. Prices vary on identical things."

"Example: A Hummel figurine was $15 in one shop and $18.50 in another. A dozen name brand golf balls was $8.50 in one Montego Bay shop and $7.50 next door. I think wearing apparel is higher here than at home."

From Madrid: "When the British pound went down, so did the peseta. A dollar used to buy 60 pesetas. Now you get 70. Franco holds a hard price line on wages and hotels. So this should help the North American coming over here."

From an airline stewardess: "I wish people would carry change. We have to sell drinks, and there's a $2.50 charge for earphones for the movie. We get $20 worth of change for the flight. If a passenger pays with a $20 bill, you can see what it does to us."

From Paris: "They say here that the 15 per cent discount for tourists' buys is on the way out." (We bought with dollars or travellers' cheques. The shop gave the discount. The government allowed it off in taxes.) "The thirty French found out about this. Began buying dollar travellers' cheques and getting discounts for themselves."

"We have never been in Mexico but are interested in going for several months. What we would like to know is how to write and rent a house."

This just doesn't work. You can't rent a house long distance as you would from city to city at home. Mexican houses are not the same as ours. I saw one house listed as "three bedrooms." One bedroom was all right. The other two were bare except for a single bed and a bare electric light hanging from the ceiling.

What you want to do is go to the town and stay in a hotel. The next day go around with a real estate agent. You should connect within three days tops. And have what you want.

Now for your towns: Guadalajara is the big town with suburbs at Ajijic and Chapala on the lake. Supermarkets and a department store. Pleasant weather at 5,000 feet. Cuernavaca is always spring at 5,000. An hour from Mexico City by car. Flowers and supermarkets. San Miguel Allende, a little higher and chill in the winter. Has an art school and a supermarket. All have a lot of American residents.

Not so well known: Morelia in the Michoacan lake country, a very pretty town but cold in the winter. Oaxaca, 300 miles south of Mexico City, is a pleasant Indian-Colonial town. I've gone through a dozen small towns that looked very nice. I have an idea houses for rent would be scarce though. And unless you have an American colony, you'll get no supermarket.

"Where should we look for sweaters?" Ireland for the bulky fisherman knits. Scotch House in London has Scottish sweaters.

Chilean Village Hit By Quake

SANTIAGO (AP)—Police said the earthquake that jarred northern Chile has killed an eight-year-old boy, injured 36 persons and caused widespread damage. The quake nearly destroyed the village of Quilahuas, knocking down about 80 per cent of the buildings.

Tips You Off

The sweater bar — almost the whole fifth floor of Simpson's in Piccadilly in London for cashmere. Austria, Norway, Denmark for ski sweaters. And Italy has good sweaters, too.

"Where should I buy women's gloves (for gifts) in Europe?" Rome has the best buys and styling is good.

"Where to buy clothes for little children in Europe..." Spain and Portugal. All handmade and very inexpensive.

Drinkers Lose To Eaters

The Christmas weekend for Greater Victoria tipplers may present a few obstacles, but diners will find plenty of places to eat a luscious repast.

For those who are undaunted by the recent rise in liquor prices, the government liquor stores will close at 6 p.m. today, and will not reopen until Wednesday.

The cocktail bars, for the most part, will be closed Christmas Day, but will operate regular hours Boxing Day.

Restaurants and coffee shops will be open Christmas Eve, and some of them Christmas Day. Most of the downtown ones will be closed Boxing Day, but two or three are expected to be open.

It will be better to be thirsty than to be hungry.

Garden Notes

Holly's Sex Pointer!

By M. V. CHESNUT

At this season of the year especially, I imagine just about every homeowner would like to have a holly tree in his garden, but a lot of folks are deterred from buying and planting one in the mistaken belief that it will be many years before the thing produces any berries.

It is true that holly is a slow grower, but not that slow. I have seen trees of some varieties beautifully decked out in their Christmas finery while no more than four or five feet tall.

One of our local nurseries, earlier this fall, was offering pot-grown specimens of Dutch holly, about 18 inches tall, and each with a few berries on it!

Botanically, holly is Ilex, an old Latin name for the evergreen holly oak tree, to which holly is supposed to bear some resemblance.

The popular name — holly — is old Anglo-Saxon for holy, so called because according to legend, the plant first appeared in the footsteps of Christ, the scarlet berries symbolizing the blood that was shed on the Cross.

In some parts of Europe the prickly kind is known as holly and the smooth-leaved kind as she-holly, and superstition claims whichever kind is used in the home for Christmas decoration will indicate whether husband or wife will wear the pants during the forthcoming year!

It is hard for us to realize today that for many centuries holly has been esteemed for its medicinal properties.

In former days the juice of the leaves was administered as a cure for pleurisy, jaundice, tetanus, smallpox and various afflictions of the eye. The herbalist Culpepper recommended fomentations made from holly bark and leaves to mend broken bones.

Even today the leaves of some varieties are dried and crushed and used as a substitute for tea. The best known is Ilex paraguensis, a South American holly that grows on river banks and along small streams.

This has been popularized under the name Yerba Mate tea, and valuable tonic properties are claimed for it.

The leaves of our common English holly, though, are known to contain the same herbal properties as Yerba Mate, although perhaps not with the same agreeable flavor, and can be dried and crushed, and either mixed with ordinary tea or used as a substitute.

Holly trees come in male, female and hermaphrodite forms. The male trees bear no berries; the females develop berries only when a male tree is nearby to pollinate the blossoms, or when the open blossoms are artificially pollinated with a tomato-setting hormone spray.

The hermaphrodite types will set a good crop of berries even when growing alone, and it is important, when only one tree is grown, to purchase this type.

Holly trees grown from seed, while excellent for hedges, are completely unpredictable as to sex and berrying capacity.

The tree we see most commonly hereabouts is the common English holly, Ilex aquifolium, with prickly, pointed leaves and scarlet berries, but there are many variations and sub-varieties available.

A selected strain known as S-11 is preferred by commercial growers for its reliability and good berry production. Ilex aquifolium pyramidalis, the so-called Dutch holly, is one of the hermaphrodites, producing berries without a mate, but is not so crinkled in the leaf.

The variegated kinds are especially attractive for Christmas decoration. Golden King is particularly fine, with a narrow band of golden yellow around the margin of the leaf.

Golden King is the reverse, yellow leaves with a green margin, while Silver Queen has deep green leaves margined with silver.

Incidentally, the man who named Golden King and Silver Queen was sadly in need of some sex education. Golden King is a female, while Silver Queen is a berryless male!

ARTHUR HOPPE Points a Moral Selfishness Rewarded

Once upon a time there were three brothers who liked to save things.

Tom was a miser and worried about saving only bits of string, pieces of tin, old telephone books and money. Mostly money.

Dick was selfish and worried about saving only himself.

But Albermarle was a born leader and he worried about saving the whole, wide wonderful world.

Tom grew up to be the richest miser in history and was universally feared. Albermarle grew up to be the greatest leader in history and was universally respected. But Dick... Well, Dick didn't grow up to be anything much of anything, and he worried about that, too.

"I wish I were feared like Tom or respected like Albermarle," he would say wistfully sometimes. But, actually, he was too worried about saving himself to give the matter much thought.

He worried about saving his hair, which was growing thin, and saving his waistline, which was growing fat, and about saving his job, so he worked hard; and saving his credit rating, so he paid his bills the first of every month.

But mostly he worried about saving his reputation. So he was pleasant to his neighbors, kindly to the office boys, gave the proper amounts to the proper charities and tried to take the right stands on the right issues of the day.

Though he never did much about any of them.

"You shouldn't be so selfish," Albermarle would chide him. "You should forget yourself and think of others."

Albermarle, being a born leader, was always thinking of others.

As a young man, he thought about the downtrodden peons of Poland and led a plot to blow up the Loyal Royal Palace. Unfortunately, the bomb misfired and he molished the local orphanage instead, but Albermarle was widely hailed as a leader of the oppressed.

As a great general he led his troops to victory in the famous Battle of Clyde's Corners in which 50,000 men were killed on each side. And in later life, he directed the glorious crusade to free the Hottentots, which he did. Though most of them were wiped out in the process.

At last, the three brothers lay dying and an Angel appeared to lead one to Heaven. "I'm all packed," said Albermarle with his crowding grin. But the Angel pointed at Dick.

"Me?" said Dick, surprised. "But I'm thoroughly selfish and have done precious little good whatsoever."

"Good gracious!" said the Angel. "We don't reward men for the good they do in their lives, but rather for the harm they don't do. Otherwise, there wouldn't be anyone in Heaven."

Moral: If you want to save the world, be selfish: think first of yourself.

SIDNEY POITIER Talks to SHEILAH GRAHAM
Work and Love Mean Life

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Ever since Sidney Poitier won the Oscar for his superb performance in Lilies of the Field, everything's been coming up roses for the likeable actor. He is currently being seen everywhere in To Sir, with Love, In the Heat of the Night and his latest success Guess Who's Coming to Dinner with Katharine Hepburn and Houghton, and the late Spencer Tracy, and he is now starring in For Love of Ivy.

Before I reveal his future plans, you might like to listen to Poitier's philosophy about work, love and life. "I enjoy working," he assured me, "and it's my great good fortune that I've kept busy. Work is therapeutic for me. Work and love are the mainstays of life." Sidney has been legally separated from his wife for three years. They have four children and one of the advantages of working recently in New York was that he could see them frequently.

Normally I'm all over the place. I like to see what life is like in all four corners of the world. But earlier in the year, after I finished Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, I took the summer off, and spent the time seeing America with my kids.

In the film with Tracy and Hepburn, he falls in love with a white girl and they plan to marry. "No, I don't anticipate any trouble in the South. I've had interesting and provocative pictures before and they have all played the south without any problems."

In March of the new year, Poitier will star for the Mirisch Company in a sequel to Heat of the Night about the crack homicide detective, Virgil Tibbs; however, this time without Rod Steiger. "I may do three or four of them, but I wouldn't go beyond that," he said.

"I'm undecided what to do in June, July and August. I'm awaiting the first draft of two scripts. Or I might just roam around the world with my kids. In September I'm doing The Last Man, a remake of James Mason's Odd Man Out, which was about the big trouble in Ireland. It will be charged to racial trouble in an American city. Before all that, I start directing my first play for Broadway, Carry Me Back to Back to Morningside Heights."

"Is it a play of violence?" I asked. "It's a play of love," he replied. "I only do positive pictures and plays. I believe in doing love pictures. There's more than enough hate and violence in real life. There are too many divisions—color, social, political, religious—human relations divisions. One of the best ways to heal most of these divisions is spread a little love within them. I've played villains before and would again, but I'm not interested in playing a villain unless the content of the film is a positive one."

At the end of '68, Sidney starts his new three-year contract with Columbia, and it's a dream. "On my new deal, I can do any original idea that comes out of my head. All I'm required to give Columbia is a 20-page treatment. If they approve, we make the film." For them Poitier will get the same sort of percentage that made him a millionaire from To Sir, with Love.

"You must be very content," I said. "Yes," he replied, "but success was never the goal. It was a by-product. It was a long struggle, but even in the struggle there was joy. I guess I'm luckier than most."

If Christ Returned
SYDNEY HARRIS

If there should be, on Christmas night, a second coming, would there not be a second crucifixion?

And this time, not by the Romans or the Jews, but by those who proudly call themselves Christians?

I wonder. I wonder how we today would regard and treat this man with His strange and frightening and "impractical" doctrines of human behavior and relationships. Would we believe and follow, any more than the masses of people in His day believed and followed?

Would not the militarists among us assail Him as a cowardly pacifist because He urges us not to resist evil?

Would not the nationalists among us attack Him as a dangerous internationalist because He tells us we are all of one flesh?

Would not the wealthy among us castigate Him as a troublemaking radical because He bars the rich from entering the kingdom of heaven?

Would not the liberals among us dismiss Him as a dreamy vagabond because He advises us to take thought for the morrow, to lay up no treasures upon earth?

Would not the ecclesiastics among us denounce Him as a ranting heretic because He cuts through the cords of ritual and commands us only to love God and our neighbors?

Would not the sentimentalists among us decide Him as a cynic because He warns us that the way to salvation is narrow and difficult?

Would not the Puritans among us despise and reject Him because He eats and drinks with publicans and sinners, preferring the company of washabbers and harlots to that of "respectable" church members?

Would not the sensual among us scorn Him because He fasts for 40 days in the desert, neglecting the needs of the body?

Would not the proud and important among us laugh at Him when He instructs the 12 disciples that he who would "first" should be the one to take the role of the least and serve all?

Would not the worldly-wise and educated among us be aghast to hear that we cannot be saved except we become as children, and that a little child shall lead us?

Would not each of us in his own way find some part of this man's saying and doing to be so threatening to our ways of life, so much at odds with our rooted beliefs, that we could not tolerate Him for long?

I wonder.

Parole Bid Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Pennell has rejected an appeal to grant amnesty to two Vancouver union officials, an aide said Friday night.

A request for parole of president Steve Stavens and secretary Homer Stevens of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union was made in the Commons Thursday by H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West) and Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle).

YEAR TERMS

Both union men were sentenced to one year in jail for contempt of court last September as the result of a labor dispute among Prince Rupert fishermen.

Herridge noted that Christmas paroles for the two was denied because they have filed appeals against their convictions.

Pennell's aide said the two men have been notified of the government's decision not to grant them paroles.

Housing

Cash Aid Pleases Campbell

The allocation of $500,000,000 to public housing in 1968 by the federal government received qualified praise from Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Friday.

He said the new program will be "all right," provided private developers pick up the slack caused by Ottawa's reallocation of housing funds.

Ottawa announced Thursday $500,000,000 will be allocated to public housing in a reduced overall budget for Central Mortgage and Housing.

LOAN EXPENSES

This means there will be $168,000,000 more for public housing, but at the expense of direct loans by the federal government to private builders.

Mr. Campbell said private developers must pick up this slack to increase the overall production of housing the province in 1968.

The provincial government has approved 1,400 housing units in principle, but the minister said he has set an average target price of $1,200 a unit.

He refused to say whether B.C. would follow the lead of Ottawa in making more money available for public housing next year. "I will not give away budget secrets," he said.

Pollution Course At UVic

Pollution, what it is, what it does, and what can be done about it, will be studied next year in a series of lectures at the University of Victoria.

Pollution is one of 16 courses offered in the evening division of 1968 spring courses from January to April at UVic. A brochure was released by the university Friday.

Lecturers from the University of Washington, UBC, UVic and Saanich municipality will form a panel under the co-ordination of Dr. W. J. Maunders, a UVic assistant geography professor to discuss pollution. Application for the courses must be made to the registration office of the Evening Division, University of Victoria.

Order of Canada

Companions Chevrier, Dupuy, Jackson; medal holders Gimby, Greene, Whitton, Karsh

Centennial, Expo Brass on Latest List

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifteen more Canadians have been named Companions of the Order of Canada and 43 have been awarded the order's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today.

In his capacity as chancellor of the order, Michener announced the appointments to complete the first year's awards of the new honors instituted to reward Canadians for service to the country.

The list contained the first appointments of retired politicians, and was sprinkled with the names of Canadians who headed Expo 67 and other centennial events. Newly-named companions of the order, who will be invested with red and white neck ribbons and pendants, are entitled to put the initials C.C. after their names. They include:

Lionel Chevrier, commissioner-general of state visits for 1967, former Canadian high commissioner in London and long-time Liberal cabinet minister.

Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Expo 67, and his deputy, Robert Shaw. Artist A. Y. Jackson, singer Lois Marshall and historian Hilda Neatby.

Robert Taschereau, retired chief justice of the Supreme Court of Canada. Among recipients of the medal of service are: John Fisher, chief commissioner of the federal centennial commission, and his deputy, Georges E. Gauthier, along with Bobby Gimby, author of the popular centennial song "Ca-na-da."

Nancy Greene, world women's ski champion, singer Monique Leyrac, ballet choreographer Celia Franca, Charlotte Whitton, former Ottawa mayor, and photographer Yousuf Karsh.

Two from Here

'I've Done a Lot' —Medal Winner

A Victoria poet and a part-time Ardmore resident have been named recipients of the Order of Canada's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today in Ottawa.

They are Audrey Alexandra Brown of 423 Superior, an author and life-long Vancouver Island resident, and Francis G. Winspear, a financier living at 687 Ardmore Drive.

Mr. Winspear, who lives most of the year at Edmonton, is a former president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Miss Brown, 63, was born in Nanaimo and has lived since 1936 in Victoria.

Miss Brown, presently employed as a dispatcher for Sea Breeze Express, is the author of six books, including A Dryad of Nanaimo and All Fools' Day.

In 1941 she received the Lorne Pierce Medal from the Royal Society of Canada, for distinguished contribution to Canadian literature. She was the first woman to receive the honor.

"I'm a very well-known writer," she commented Friday night. "I'm no Johnny-come-lately."

"I think I have done a lot for the world of literature in Canada and that's why I have received this latest honor," she added.

But she gave no credit for "my success" to Victoria newspapers who she said "just have not recognized me."

She added she would have welcomed publicity even if it was critical of her writings.

"When nothing is said about me nothing happens, but if you had even written nasty things about me" I would have been consoled by sympathizers," she told a reporter.

"They all knew about me in the east and Europe. The library in Victoria has a lot about me."

Writer Rejects 'Second' Label

TORONTO (CP) — Author Morley Callaghan of Toronto has turned down a medal of service of the Order of Canada because he says it would make him and other Canadian writers appear second-rate.

Callaghan said he considered a medal "a rank of second class" in comparison with the order's other decoration — Companion of the Order.

The companions named in the first honors list in July included Montreal poet F. R. Scott, Winnipeg novelist Gabrielle Roy and Montreal novelist Hugh Lennox.

"If writers are being given orders of the first class then I object to being one of the second class," Callaghan said in an interview.

"All my life in Canada I have stood for an adult view of literature."

"I don't give a damn one way or another about this award. And I'm willing to applaud every medal, donation or award anyone else gets. But this is setting up a pecking order in writing."

Claude Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, last year described Callaghan as Canada's greatest novelist. Edmund Wilson, American literary critic, has called him "the most unjustly neglected novelist in the English-speaking world."

Callaghan said the order was "a game having to do with vanities."

He said more and more Canadians had appetites for honors and titles and that the government was doing its best to feed them.

Rome Next After Viet Stop?

JOHNSON HIDES IN SKY

SAIGON (AP) — President Johnson, flying a tight and secret schedule, paid quick Christmas-season visits today to U.S. fighting forces in Thailand and South Vietnam and then flew off for another unannounced destination en route home from Australia.

The best guess for the next major stop was Rome and a visit in Vatican City with Pope Paul to talk on peace in Vietnam.

Johnson apparently decided to make a round-the-world tour of his original visit to Australia to attend memorial services for its lost prime minister.

WORDS OF CHEER

Johnson flew to South Vietnam from an air force base in Thailand and landed, as he had more than a year before, at Cam Ranh, beside the South China sea. There and in Thailand he gave words of cheer, distributed medals and uttered his thanks to the troops.

He told 2,500 combat troops at Cam Ranh their enemy "knows that he has met his master in the field."

"We're not going to yield and we're not going to shimmy," he said.

IN GOOD SHAPE

At one point, before a throng of cheering soldiers, he told the U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, "I wish I had things in as good shape in the United States as you have here."

Bareheaded and wearing brown slacks and a khaki shirt, the president appeared high-spirited as he went through a packed, 105-minute visit to the base. His plane, escorted by four Phantom jets, touched down at 8:40 a.m. and left at 10:25 a.m.

BY CHRISTMAS

Officials would not confirm his next destination but said he will be in the White House Christmas day, Monday.

McCarthy

LBJ Foe Scorches Networks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem., Minn.) asked the Federal Communications Commission Friday to order the U.S. radio-television networks to give him air time for a reply to President Johnson's statements made in a Tuesday night broadcast.

The three major networks said, in rejecting McCarthy's request, that he is not entitled to equal time under the Communications Act because the president is not declared a candidate for re-election.

McCarthy plans to enter several primary elections in which party registrants indicate their preference of candidates—in a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

McCarthy's campaign manager, Blair Clark, telegraphed a formal complaint to the FCC against the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

For the networks to pretend that Johnson is not a candidate for re-election "is to deny a fact which every American child knows," Clark's wire said.

Clark repeated McCarthy's contention that Johnson "made a clear personal attack" on the senator in Tuesday night's broadcast, and said "it would be most dangerous for our democracy to deny his declared opponents the same access to the public airways."

Pearson Toast

'Libre' Echoes To Laughter

By RICHARD JACKSON, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Hail . . . and farewell. And do you know what Prime Minister Pearson's toast to the new year is? It happened at the privy council's staff Christmas party. They asked the boss to drop in for a drop, and he did.

It was a sentimental occasion, for it would be Pearson's last Christmas fling in the old East Block offices.

As they raised their glasses to the new year, Pearson proclaimed "Vive le Pearson libre."

It was a toast, in truth, to the night, 105 days from now, when he does, in fact, become "free"—free of that crushing load of national responsibilities that bow any prime minister's head, grey his hair, stoop his shoulders and make him old before his time.

But it broke up his staff, this wry take-off of a more famous "vive-libre" sounded last summer from the city hall balcony in Montreal by that old international trouble-maker Charles de Gaulle.

Somehow Lester Pearson's grinning, good-humored "vive-libre," cut down to size de Gaulle's very different "vive libre."

And for it and for his light right touch, the staff cheered him, English and French alike.

U.K. 'Giving Up' On Market Bids

LONDON (AP) — The Financial Times says Britain will not apply again to join the European Common Market while French President de Gaulle still is in power.

Reginald Dale, the newspaper's European correspondent, says in an article: "This is the government's reaction to the French veto on negotiations at Tuesday's council of ministers meeting in Brussels."

"From now on, Britain will concentrate on forging closer links with the (friendly) Five and no solution which involves the Common Market as such will be sought until there is a change of regime in France."

"The over-all direction of British policy will remain the same, however, and the government is confident of success in negotiations for . . . entry once General de Gaulle leaves the political arena."

The friendly Five are West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Happiness Cheques Sent To End Goodwill Chain

Postal workers Friday forged the last link in the chain of good wishes from Victorians to their less fortunate fellow citizens. They delivered 500 cheques for $33 each to needy families, whose names had been selected by the Victoria Christmas Bureau from more than 1,000 recommended for assistance by social workers and organizations.

The money was raised through the Daily Colonist 500 Fund.

In addition, Friday, seven more cheques

were sent out, and will be delivered this morning to people who wouldn't otherwise be getting help.

Last-minute donations to the fund saw the total climb past the $17,000 to set a record high for the help The Colonist was able to channel from generous subscribers for those in need.

Money left over will be kept in the fund to start off next year's drive.

Burning Stops Wave of Fire

By JEAN MacGREGOR
LAKE COWICHAN —

With snow on the hills and Smokey the Bear in hibernation, forest officials have turned their attention to a major public controversy—fall slash fires.

On this Labor Day weekend, as the first rains in many weeks soaked into the thirsty ground and tinder dry forests, company officials, loggers and other residents in the Lake Cowichan area breathed a sigh of relief.

Raging forest fires, numbering more than 400, in other parts of the province had destroyed millions of dollars worth of timber and equipment during the hot, dry summer. However, forests in the Lake Cowichan area were left untouched.

Then, less than two weeks later, slash fires raged out of control in many areas of the district.

"Why?" was the big question asked by many residents.

"Why, when our area escaped the forest fire dilemma all summer did the companies light slash fires and allow them to get out of control?" the majority of residents cried.

Few people seem to know the answer — even some of the men who work in the logging industry, which plays such a large part in the Lake Cowichan economy, are not definite about the reason themselves.

Big Threat

But as one forest ranger put it, "I would not live in Lake Cowichan if the logging companies did not burn their slash each fall."

"Every person, every building and every property in the district would be threatened by complete obliteration every summer."

"If the slash was not burned this whole area would go up in smoke and flames in a matter of hours if a fire ever started."

The slash is the unavoidable result of timber-harvesting. It includes branches and tops, the debris from snags, defective trees, and breakage during felling and yarding.

Kindling

Bark and splinters from the manufacture of minor products in the woods provide additional kindling.

The debris left after a timber harvest is a mass of very fine to very coarse material — from needles weighing a fraction of a gram to logs weighing tons, and from short branches to 100-foot snags.

Expensive

The coarse material has good possibilities for being used and will gradually fade as being a problem in the woods.

The fine debris presents a different problem. This material is bulky in proportion to the volume of its solid content and consequently, is expensive to handle.

Unfortunately, it is much more hazardous than the heavier components, igniting more easily. Since these slash fuels serve as kindling to ignite heavier material, the primary aim in reducing the fire hazard is to eliminate it as soon as possible.

Snags Down

Compulsory slash disposal was introduced in the Vancouver forest district, which includes Lake Cowichan, in 1939. This was necessary because of an increasing number of uncontrollable accidental fires in logging slash, culminating in the 75,000-acre Campbell River fire in 1938.

Section 116 of the Forest Act concerns the disposal of logging slash by burning and the felling of snags. It has changed little since being introduced.

At the outset, very little was known about this new facet of forest protection, and each logging operator was simply required to burn his slash annually, with the exception of those areas specifically exempted by the forest service.

Special Area

In 1946, the present policy of requiring operators to burn only those areas instructed by the forest service came into effect, primarily to eliminate indiscriminate burning and to bring slash disposal under closer supervision.

In September this year, all logging companies in the Lake Cowichan area had 6,000 acres of slash, of which 6,800 was to be burned this fall.

The area includes the village of Lake Cowichan west to the Pacific coast and south to Port Renfrew.

Heavy Rain

Following the heavy rains on the Labor Day weekend, officials of the various logging companies and the forest service inspected the slash areas and decided slash burning procedures should be started.

Permission was granted by the forest service because at that time sufficient rain had fallen to make the area safe for slash burning.

The Lake Cowichan area is notorious for its heavy rainfall.

Barnett, NDP

Program Lashed

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP member Tom Barnett has charged in the Commons that CBC producers supplied the beer to get shots of Vancouver Island youths drinking on a beach.

Mr. Barnett, Comox-Alberni, also complained that producers of a Camera West series documentary on the Alberni had several youths in their fathers' cars drive round and round a school to give the impression that most drove big cars.

UNFAIR

Mr. Barnett said most of his constituents found the documentary, shown by the CBC Aug. 20 and titled Young in a Small Town, "an unfair portrayal."

Doing what he called "my share of the bloodletting" during detailed study of a new Broadcasting Act, Mr. Barnett described as "cheap and sloppy journalism" a preview article in the CBC Times on the documentary.

It had said there were 20,000 residents in the area, then added that "great hordes" of youths left each weekend for the cities.

of over 100 inches a year, and once the rains start in the fall, usually in September or October, there are no more opportunities to burn slash until the following year.

Heat Wave

This fall's slash burning program started smoothly, but as the days continued after the holiday weekend, temperatures soared to the high 80s and low 90s, drying up all moisture.

On the weekend of Sept. 15, the first slash fire jumped its fireguards. The further lighting of slash fires stopped immediately, but the high temperatures, and no rain sparked more slash fires which raged out of control.

Hundreds of loggers and forestry crews were taken off their regular jobs and rushed to the fire scenes.

Water Bomber

The fires were quickly confined to specific areas, but even with the use of water bombers, the fires were not brought completely under control until rain fell at the end of September.

The forest service has released statistics on the slash fires in the Lake Cowichan area.

Out of the 6,800 acres of slash to be burned this fall, 5,400 acres of the instructed areas were burned.

Wet Weather

The remainder, including some areas where companies had fortunately not started to burn their slash in the middle of September, could not be burned in October because of wet weather.

Over and above the 5,400 acres which would have been burnt this fall anyway, a total of 3,000 acres were destroyed by the escaping slash fires. The largest fire was in the Robertson Valley area.

Virgin Wood

This 3,000 acres included virgin and second-growth timber ranging from seedlings to mature timber.

The forest service reports damage to timber and equipment in the Lake Cowichan area amounted to $280,000.

Cost to the logging companies and forest service of extinguishing the forest fires added a further $400,000.

No Guess

A forestry official said: "The only statistic we have not got is the number of man-hours spent fighting the fires at Lake Cowichan. This would be impossible even to estimate."

"Record low humidity, record high temperatures and winds are something none of us can foresee. This situation wasn't anyone's fault — we were just unlucky this year," he said.

The burning of slash is governed by rigid laws, using the latest information and best techniques available. But man is yet to learn how to control the weather.

RCMP Out?

Councillor Wants Municipal Police

NORTH COWICHAN — At least one councillor is in favor of a municipal police force.

His comments concerned the signing of the latest RCMP contract with Ottawa.

The contract started April 1 and will end March 31 next year.

Coun. George Whittaker hinted Thursday, "I feel it would be better to have our own municipal police force."

The RCMP contract costs the municipality $81,000 for five policemen at Duncan and five at the Chemainus police station.

Coun. Whittaker said, "We are just about ready for our own police force, and I think we would get better policing for the same cost."

"I suspect North Cowichan is paying quite a bit that goes into police work on the Trans-Canada Highway and the Indian Reserve."

Council was advised by the RCMP that in future two-year contracts will be provided, and communities of more than 15,000 not covered by RCMP, will not be able to sign a contract with the federal force.

Coun. Whittaker said, "If the city of Duncan and North Cowichan amalgamate, it would certainly be a good move to have our own police."

"By then we would have enough residents, and perhaps the RCMP would not carry on because then we would be a new municipality."

Reeve Donald Morton said he would not agree to the establishment of a municipal police force, unless he is thoroughly convinced it would be economically sound and feasible.

By KLAUS MUENTZER

DUNCAN — The legal double standard that exists in transactions between whites and Indians, cost a white man time, money, and embarrassment this week.

And all because of some Christmas trees.

Paul De Rois, 25, said his trouble began when he made a deal with a member of the Cowichan Indian Band.

He went to the home of Raymond Joseph and asked him if he could cut some Christmas trees on his property near Dougan's Lake.

So as not to trespass on other property he went back to Mr. Joseph, who described the boundaries on the spot.

Mr. De Rois took 35 Christmas trees and paid Mr. Joseph $10 for the deal.

Returning with his truckload of Christmas trees to a Duncan service station he was questioned by police about where he obtained them.

He was told the trees were cut illegally because he had taken them from Crown land.

Meanwhile, Mr. Joseph arrived at the scene and assured police Mr. De Rois had permission to cut the trees.

Mr. Joseph remarked that the land from where the trees had come is his property and had been the property of his father and his grandfather before him.

B.C. Forest Service officials were notified they sealed the trees.

Then they were seized by an Indian Affairs department official.

Mr. De Rois said he explained the situation to the Band Council and the Indian Affairs department official released the trees after another $1 per tree was paid by Mr. De Rois.

Mr. De Rois said, "I had done everything that I would have done if I had dealt with a white man, but I did not realize that there are two different laws for the white people and for the Indians in Canada."

It was explained to him that originally the Indian Act had been written to protect the natives, and that occasional revisions have not been kept up with the times.

Mr. De Rois, a sawmill worker, was born and raised in Indonesia. He came to Canada six years ago.

He said his understanding was that he was charged the $1 per tree because he had trespassed on Indian land without the band council's consent.

Indian Chief Dennis Alphonse said Mr. De Rois was not charged for trespassing, but because he had cut trees which belong to the band.

Mr. Alphonse noted the Indian land owner should have obtained permission from the council before allowing Mr. De Rois to cut trees because trees, or any other resources, belong to the band. They are considered a capital asset.

Homes Rise For Band

DUNCAN — The building site on Boys Road where 19 new houses for Indians are springing up, is hectic with activity, with the majority of houses in the new subdivision already roofed and sheathed.

Project manager Billy Boychuck, who has four union carpenters and 20 Indian workers under his command, said "Without these boys and without their co-operation we would not be as far as we are now."

Construction started Oct. 23 and the deadline is set for March.

Referring to his Indian crew, Mr. Boychuck said "We now have Ray Peter and Cleo August as foremen, and all of them are very willing to learn a trade."

Despite freezing temperatures, the construction site has a cheerful atmosphere.

Among the workers is Abraham Joe who pushed strongly for new houses in 1966.

Earlier Mr. Joe said he would not smile until the houses are all ready.

Although with a grin on his face did say "I will smile when I see the smoke rise from the chimneys."

The band has received some useful advice from co-op expert John A. Trew.

Manager of the band is Ross Modeste.

One of the Indian workers, Sam Henry, 27, while hammering a roof support into a house, said he is determined to become a contractor for himself when the present job is completed.

Only two weeks ago he was taken to the Cowichan District Hospital with a deep wound in his leg, cut by a skilsaw at the site.

As soon as his condition improved, Mr. Henry was back on the job.

He is married and has two sons.

Mr. Henry had some training at the Vancouver Vocational School in the late 1950s and until the construction started here he was gang saw operator at a local sawmill.

"I love building houses," he said.

Mr. Boychuck said "We have a potential of two foremen and eight carpenters on the job right now and I'm sure there will be more as time goes on."

Neptune Struck Basement And Friday's Fun Began

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — Friday was a glorious day to wake up to.

Only the third morning before Christmas, and one could expect to see the hills shrouded in white, the silent streets hung with icicles, and cars squeaking along the crisp snow.

The house was silent.

The world was silent.

The furnace was silent, and what was worse, it remained silent.

That was the time I first realized something was amiss in my idyllic dream of complete happiness.

I really knew what was wrong, but I still suffer from that childlike belief that if you don't look at it, it might not actually exist.

But the moment of truth screamed for recognition, and I opened the basement door.

***

There was our dog, thumping his tail apologetically, as if I would believe that the four inches of water on the floor could be his fault.

He is a big dog, but not that big.

I ignored the dampness, and had breakfast, lit a cigarette, and went to town with the wife and daughter.

I did my usual rounds to see if there had been anything worth while happening in town, only to have the thought of hours of cleaning up nagging at the back of my mind.

***

Finally, I returned home knowing full well that the good fairies would not do the job for me.

I began.

I still could not convince the dog that I did not blame him.

Before starting the job, I looked outside, to see how big a job it was going to be.

It seems that whenever there is a large rainfall, atop several inches of snow, my basement volunteers to drain all the highland for several blocks.

***

I saw that there were still many hundreds of gallons yet to find their way, so I headed them off at the pass.

I put a bucket full of sand over my storm drain.

The man who built that storm drain was proud of his work.

He put a grill into the pipe, so no leaves and dirt could float down and plug the works.

***

He put that grill in well, recessed into a full inch of concrete.

I can imagine him as he spend happy hours smoothing the cement in place, envisioning my delight in his craftsmanship.

***

He did not give second thought that by cementing the damned grill in place made it impossible to replace it with a plug.

I swiped my wife's wash machine do-dad that fits onto the tap to drain tubs.

With the water rushing full blast, the flood level began to drop.

***

I helped for a while, filling buckets, but one's back can only take so much.

I stopped only long enough to have lunch and a cup of coffee.

By nightfall, the job was almost finished.

***

The next job will be to total up the damage to irreparable junk that was on the floor.

The garbage collectors will find the Olsons have the cleanest garbage in town when next they come.

Oh Merry Christmas!

Would You Believe, Courthouse Bids

DUNCAN — Five tenders for the new Duncan courthouse were opened Friday. The lowest bid was submitted by Farmers' Construction, Victoria, of about $376,000. Pat Rogers of Duncan said all five bids were within the $375,000 range. A contract will be let within one month.

NANAIMO — The hospital board intends recommending that K. G. Wall, 31 Kennedy, Nanaimo, who submitted the highest bid for the 42-year-old hospital building on Kennedy, be sold the structure for $38,000. Mr. Wall, a land developer, will use the property for low-cost housing. The building has stood in the midst of controversy for the past four years, too old to conform to today's medical standards, and not sound enough to be eligible for provincial grants.

PORT ALBERNI — Cody

Good, 20, a university student from Port Alberni, will receive a medal award Jan. 5 in Edmonton, Alta., from the Life Insurance Co. of Canada for his unsuccessful attempt last January to save a woman from drowning. Other awards will go to a four-year-old boy from a farming community near Calgary for saving a three-year-old boy, and to two men. The candidates are brought to the company's attention by citizens in western Canada.

Jerusalem from Tofino

Peace and String

PORT ALBERNI — About 700 white people, Indians and young Indian children came from throughout the Alberni Valley Friday night to enjoy the Friendship Centre's Christmas party.

The party, which was a bigger success than last year's, featured a play, go go dancing by eight Indian maidens, coral singing by the centre's clubs and a full-course supper.

A magician also performed tricks galore with a piece of string.

The silent play was entitled The Operation.

The two-day Christmas festivities to continue tonight, with a dance from 8 p.m. until mid-

Said manager Francis Amos, "But they're not from Jerusalem, they're from Tofino."

The band, a five-piece combo, is led by Walter Martin.

***

Just in time, workers managed to get the new furnace installed, with only 48 hours to really get the chill off the building before guests started to arrive to the party Friday. New washroom facilities were also completed to bring the building further in line with the building inspectors requirements.

Under the direction of Mr.

Amos, the lower main floor, all that could be used until the furnace was finished, has taken on a bright new look. Gay new curtains made by one of the women's groups, brighten the outlook.

A new set of bookshelves now houses volumes which have been donated over the past couple of years.

The teenage girls decorated the hall and the boys set up tables ready for the dinner.

Bazaars, rummage sales and individual donations from various groups using the centre made up the bulk of the funds for the big dinner, but donations from members of the non-Indian community added some of the more festive touches.

CENTENNIAL BRASS JOINS MEDAL LIST

Artist, Skier, Singer, Judge Honored

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifteen more Canadians have been named Companions of the Order of Canada and 43 have been awarded the order's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today.

In his capacity as chancellor of the order, Michener announced the appointments to complete the first year's awards of the new honors instituted to reward Canadians for service to the country.

The list contained the first appointments of retired politicians, and was sprinkled with the names of Canadians who headed Expo 67 and other centennial events.

Newly-named companions of the order, who will be invested with red and white neck ribbons and pendants, are entitled to put the initials C.C. after their names. They include:

Lionel Chevrier, commissioner-general of state visits for 1967, former Canadian high commissioner in London and long-time Liberal cabinet minister.

mayor, and photographer Yousuf Karsh.

The order was instituted July 1 when Governor-General Michener was invested with his ribbon and pendant by the Queen. The first list of awards was issued July 7 and contained the names of 35 companions and 55 medal winners.

Today's Government House

announcement said the selection of winners was made by an advisory council on the basis of merit, "especially service to Canada or humanity at large."

The advisory council is composed of Chief Justice Robert Cartwright, heads of the Canada Council, the Royal Society of Canada, and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and two senior government officials — R. G. Robertson, clerk of the privy council, and G. G. E. Steele, undersecretary of state.

The announcement said the council "has followed the policy of deferring until after their retirement, consideration of party politicians, judges serving on the bench or members of the advisory council itself."

Further awards will be made next year. Provision was made in the order's charter for appointment of 25 companions and 50 medal-of-service winners each year, but to start the order in Centennial Year, double the number were named.

The order's charter also provides for awarding medals of courage for outstanding bravery. None has yet been awarded.

Recipients of the honors announced today will be invested with their ribbons, Continued on Page 3

'I've Done a Lot' —Medal Winner

A Victoria poet and a part-time Ardmore resident have been named recipients of the Order of Canada's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today in Ottawa.

They are Audrey Alexandra Brown of 423 Superior, an author and life-long Vancouver Island resident, and Francis G. Winspear, a financier living at 687 Ardmore Drive.

Mr. Winspear, who lives most of the year at Edmonton, is a former president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Brown, 63, was born in Nanaimo and has lived since 1936 in Victoria.

Miss Brown, presently employed as a dispatcher for Sea Breeze Express, is the author of six books, including A Dryad of Nanaimo and All Fools' Day.

In 1941 she received the Lorne Pierce Medal from the Royal Society of Canada, for distinguished contribution to Canadian literature. She was the first woman to receive the honor.

"I'm a very well-known writer," she commented Friday night, "I'm no Johnny-come-lately."

"I think I have done a lot for the world of literature in Canada and that's why I have received this latest honor," she added.

But she gave no credit for "my success" to Victoria newspapers who she said "just have not recognized me."

She added she would have welcomed publicity even if it was critical of her writings.

"When nothing is said about me nothing happens, but if you had even written nasty things about me I would have been consoled by sympathizers," she told a reporter.

"They all knew about me in the east and Europe. The library in Victoria has a lot about me."

Writer Rejects 'Second' Label

TORONTO (CP) — Author Morley Callaghan of Toronto has turned down a Medal of Service of the Order of Canada because he says it would make him and other Canadian writers appear second-rate.

Callaghan said he considered a medal "a rank of second class" in comparison with the order's other decoration — Companion of the Order.

The companions named in the first honors list in July included Montreal poet F. R. Scott, Winnipeg novelist Gabrielle Roy and Montreal novelist Hugh McLennan.

"If writers are being given orders of the first class then I object to being one of the second class," Callaghan said in an interview.

"All my life in Canada I have stood for an adult view of literature."

"I don't give a damn one way or another about this award. And I'm willing to applaud every medal, donation or award anyone else gets. But this is setting up a pecking order in writing."

Claude Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, last year described Callaghan as Canada's greatest novelist.

Edmund Wilson, American

Callaghan

literary critic, has called him "the most unjustly neglected novelist in the English-speaking world."

Callaghan said the order was "a game having to do with vanities."

He said more and more Canadians had appetites for honors and titles and that the government was doing its best to feed them.

Cyprus Mandate Beats Deadline In UN Committee

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — After days of back-room negotiating which forced cancellation of several scheduled meetings, the UN Security Council Friday agreed on a resolution extending the mandate of the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus for three months.

It was a close race against time, with the force facing elimination if its mandate was not renewed by Dec. 26.

ALL PARTIES

The 15-nation council included in the resolution an appeal to all the parties involved in the crisis which brought Greece and Turkey to the brink of war to show moderation and restraint and to refrain from any action which would further aggravate the Cyprus situation.

The approved resolution asked the secretary-general to report to the council "as appropriate" on his contacts with Cyprus, Greece and Turkey.

LARGER FORCE

It did not make reference to enlarging the force, as suggested by Thant in his peace proposal which the three countries agreed to earlier. It was expected these matters would be discussed before the three-month extension ends.

The council was forewarned of difficulties on this point, with Cyprus and Turkey known to be in disagreement and the Soviet Union and France serving notice they would oppose any enlarged role for the force.

Johnson Plane Hides in Sky But It May Be Rome-Bound

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistani officials said President Lyndon Johnson was stopping here en route home from Vietnam. They said President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was flying here to meet Johnson.

The best guess for the next major stop was Rome and a visit in Vatican City with Pope Paul to talk on peace in Vietnam.

Johnson apparently decided to make a round-the-world tour of his original visit to Australia to attend memorial services for its late prime minister.

WORDS OF CHEER

Johnson flew to South Vietnam from an air force base in Thailand and landed, as he had more than a year before, at Cam Ranh, beside the South China sea. There and in Thailand he gave words of cheer, distributed medals and uttered his thanks to the troops.

IN GOOD SHAPE

At one point, before a throng of cheering soldiers, he told the U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, "I wish I had things in as good shape in the United States as you have here."

Bareheaded and wearing brown slacks and a khaki shirt, the president appeared high-spirited as he went through a packed, 105-minute visit to the base. His plane, escorted by four Phantom jets, touched down at 8:40 a.m. and left at 10:25 a.m.

BY CHRISTMAS

Officials would not confirm his next destination but said he will be in the White House Christmas day, Monday.

LBJ Foe Scorches Networks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem. Minn.) asked the Federal Communications Commission Friday to order the U.S. radio-television networks to give him air time for a reply to President Johnson's statements made in a Tuesday night broadcast.

The three major networks said, in rejecting McCarthy's request, that he is not entitled to equal time under the Communications Act because the president is not declared a candidate for re-election.

McCarthy plans to enter several primary elections—in which party registrants indicate their preference of candidates—in a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

McCarthy's campaign manager, Blak Clark, telegraphed a formal complaint to the FCC against the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

For the networks to pretend that Johnson is not a candidate for re-election "is to deny a fact which every American child knows," Clark's wire said.

'Libre' Echoes To Laughter

By RICHARD JACKSON, Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Hail . . . and farewell. And do you know what Prime Minister Pearson's toast to the new year is? It happened at the privy council's staff Christmas party. They asked the boss to drop in for a drop, and he did.

It was a sentimental occasion, for it would be Pearson's last Christmas fling in the old East Block offices.

As they raised their glasses to the new year, Pearson proclaimed "Vive le Pearson libre."

It was a toast, in truth, to the night, 105 days from now, when he does, in fact, become "free"—free of that crushing load of national responsibilities that bow any prime minister's head, grey his hair, stoop his shoulders and make him old before his time.

But it broke up his staff, this wry take-off of a more famous "vive-libre" sounded last summer from the city hall balcony in Montreal by that old international trouble-maker Charles de Gaulle.

Somewhat Lester Pearson's grinning, good-humored "vive-libre," cut down to size de Gaulle's very different "vive libre."

And for it and for his light right touch, the staff cheered him, English and French alike.

U.K. 'Giving Up' On Market Bids

LONDON (AP) — The Financial Times says Britain will not apply again to join the European Common Market while

French President de Gaulle still is in power.

Reginald Dale, the newspaper's European correspondent, says in an article:

"This is the government's reaction to the French veto on negotiations for . . . entry once council of ministers meeting in Brussels."

"From now on, Britain will concentrate on forging closer links with the (friendly) Five and no solution which involves the Common Market as such will be sought until there is a change of regime in France."

The over-all direction of British policy will remain the same, however, and the government is confident of success in negotiations for . . . entry once General de Gaulle leaves the political arena."

The friendly Five are West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Artist, Skier, Singer, Judge Honored

OTTAWA (CP) — Fifteen more Canadians have been named Companions of the Order of Canada and 43 have been awarded the order's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today.

In his capacity as chancellor of the order, Michener announced the appointments to complete the first year's awards of the new honors instituted to reward Canadians for service to the country.

The list contained the first appointments of retired politicians, and was sprinkled with the names of Canadians who headed Expo 67 and other centennial events.

Newly-named companions of the order, who will be invested with red and white neck ribbons and pendants, are entitled to put the initials C.C. after their names. They include:

Lionel Chevrier, commissioner-general of state visits for 1967, former Canadian high commissioner in London and long-time Liberal cabinet minister.

Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general of Expo 67, and his deputy, Robert Shaw.

Artist A. Y. Jackson, singer Lela Marshall and historian Hilda Neatby.

Among recipients of the medal of service are:

Nancy Greene, world women's ski champion, singer Monique Leyrac, ballet choreographer Celia Franca, Charlotte Whitton, former Ottawa

mayor, and photographer Yousuf Karsh.

The order was instituted July 1 when Governor-General Michener was invested with his ribbon and pendant by the Queen. The first list of awards was issued July 7 and contained the names of 35 companions and 55 medal winners.

Today's Government House

announcement said the selection of winners was made by an advisory council on the basis of merit, "especially service to Canada or humanity at large."

The advisory council is composed of Chief Justice Robert Cartwright, heads of the Canada Council, the Royal Society of Canada, and the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and two senior government officials — R. G. Robertson, clerk of the privy council, and G. G. E. Steele, undersecretary of state.

The announcement said the council "has followed the policy of deferring until after their retirement, consideration of party politicians, judges serving on the bench, or members of the advisory council itself."

Further awards will be made next year. Provision was made in the order's charter for appointment of 25 companions and 50 medal-of-service winners each year, but to start the order in Centennial Year, double the number were named.

The order's charter also provides for awarding medals of courage for outstanding bravery. None has yet been awarded.

Recipients of the honors announced today will be invested with their ribbons,

'I've Done a Lot' —Medal Winner

A Victoria poet and a part-time Ardmore resident have been named recipients of the Order of Canada's Medal of Service, Governor-General Michener announced today in Ottawa.

They are Audrey Alexandra Brown of 423 Superior, an author and life-long Vancouver Island resident, and Francis G. Winspear, a financier living at 687 Ardmore Drive.

Mr. Winspear, who lives most of the year at Edmonton, is a former president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Brown, 61, was born in Nanaimo and has lived since 1936 in Victoria.

Miss Brown, presently employed as a dispatcher for Sea Breeze Express, is the author of six books, including A Dryad of Nanaimo and All Fools' Day.

In 1941 she received the Lorne Pierce Medal from the Royal Society of Canada, for distinguished contribution to Canadian literature. She was the first woman to receive the honor.

"I'm a very well-known writer," she commented Friday night, "I'm no Johnny-come-lately."

"I think I have done a lot for the world of literature in Canada and that's why I have received this latest honor," she added.

But she gave no credit for "my success" to Victoria newspapers who she said "just have not recognized me."

She added she would have welcomed publicity even if it was critical of her writings.

"When nothing is said about me nothing happens, but if you had even written nasty things about me I would have been consoled by sympathizers," she told a reporter.

"They all knew about me in the east and Europe. The library in Victoria has a lot about me."

Writer Rejects 'Second' Label

TORONTO (CP) — Author Morley Callaghan of Toronto has turned down a Medal of Service of the Order of Canada because he says it would make him and other Canadian writers appear second-rate.

Callaghan said he considered a medal "a rank of second class" in comparison with the order's other decoration — Companion of the Order.

The companions named in the first honors list in July included Montreal poet P. R. Scott, Winnipeg novelist Gabrielle Roy and Montreal novelist Hugh McLennan.

"If writers are being given orders of the first class then I object to being one of the second class," Callaghan said in an interview.

"All my life in Canada I have stood for an adult view of literature."

"I don't give a damn one way or another about this award. And I'm willing to applaud every medal, donation or award anyone else gets. But this is setting up a pecking order in writing."

Claude Bissell, president of the University of Toronto, last year described Callaghan as Canada's greatest novelist.

Edmund Wilson, American

Callaghan

literary critic, has called him "the most unjustly neglected novelist in the English-speaking world."

Callaghan said the order was "a game having to do with vanities."

He said more and more Canadians had appetites for honors and titles and that the government was doing its best to feed them.

At 63, Callaghan is the author of two plays, 16 books and more than 100 short stories.

Cyprus Mandate Beats Deadline In UN Committee

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — After days of back-room negotiating which forced cancellation of several scheduled meetings, the UN Security Council Friday agreed on a resolution extending the mandate of the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus for three months.

It was a close race against time, with the force facing elimination if its mandate was not renewed by Dec. 26.

ALL PARTIES

The 15-nation council included in the resolution an appeal to all the parties involved in the crisis which brought Greece and Turkey to the brink of war to show moderation and restraint and to refrain from any action which would further aggravate the Cyprus situation.

The approved resolution asked the secretary-general to report to the council "as appropriate" on his contacts with Cyprus, Greece and Turkey.

LARGER FORCE

It did not make reference to enlarging the force, as suggested by Thant in his peace proposal which the three countries agreed to earlier. It was expected, these matters would be discussed before the three-month extension ends.

The council was forewarned of difficulties on this point, with Cyprus and Turkey known to be in disagreement and the Soviet Union and France serving notice they would oppose any enlarged role for the force.

Happiness Cheques Sent To End Goodwill Chain

Postal workers Friday forged the last link in the chain of good wishes from Victorians to their less fortunate fellow citizens.

They delivered 500 cheques for $33 each to needy families, whose names had been selected by the Victoria Christmas Bureau from more than 1,000 recommended for assistance by social workers and organizations.

The money was raised through the Daily Colonist 500 Fund.

In addition, Friday, seven more cheques

were sent out, and will be delivered this morning to people who wouldn't otherwise be getting help.

Last-minute donations to the fund saw the total climb past the $17,000 to set a record high for the help The Colonist was able to channel from generous subscribers for those in need.

Money left over will be kept in the fund to start off next year's drive.

Johnson Plane Hides in Sky But It May Be Rome-Bound

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistani officials said President Lyndon Johnson was stopping here en route home from Vietnam. They said President Mohammad Ayub Khan of Pakistan was flying here to meet Johnson.

The best guess for the next major stop was Rome and a visit in Vatican City with Pope Paul to talk on peace in Vietnam.

Johnson apparently decided to make a round-the-world tour of his original visit to Australia to attend memorial services for its late prime minister.

WORDS OF CHEER

Johnson flew to South Vietnam from an air force base in Thailand and landed, as he had more than a year before, at Cam Ranh, beside the South China sea. There and in Thailand he gave words of cheer, distributed medals and uttered his thanks to the troops.

He told 2,500 combat troops at Cam Ranh their enemy "knows that he has met his master in the field."

IN GOOD SHAPE

At one point, before a throng of cheering soldiers, he told the U.S. commander in Vietnam, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, "I wish I had things in as good shape in the United States as you have here."

Bareheaded and wearing brown slacks and a khaki shirt, the president appeared high-spirited as he went through a packed, 105-minute visit to the base. His plane, escorted by four Phantom jets, touched down at 8:40 a.m. and left at 10:25 a.m.

BY CHRISTMAS

Officials would not confirm his next destination but said he will be in the White House Christmas day, Monday.

McCarthy

LBJ Foe Scorches Networks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Eugene McCarthy (Dem. Minn.) asked the Federal Communications Commission Friday to order the U.S. radio-television networks to give him air time for a reply to President Johnson's statements made in a Tuesday night broadcast.

The three major networks said, in rejecting McCarthy's request, that he is not entitled to equal time under the Communications Act because the president is not declared a candidate for re-election.

McCarthy plans to enter several primary elections—in which party registrants indicate their preference of candidates—in a bid for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

McCarthy's campaign manager, Blaise Clark, telegraphed a formal complaint to the FCC against the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

For the networks to pretend that Johnson is not a candidate for re-election "is to deny a fact which every American child knows," Clark's wire said.

Clark repeated McCarthy's contention that Johnson "made a clear personal attack" on the senator in Tuesday night's broadcast, and said "it would be most dangerous for our democracy to deny his declared opponents the same access to the public airways."

Here Three Weeks For Heaven's Sake

AND IT CAME TO PASS, ALMOST: All the sick jokes ever uttered about the Bible come to life in the film of the same name. The Bible, Hollywood version, opened Friday at the Odeon for a three-week run. Nobody stood up and shouted "Author, author," but the way the film is presented and the way the publicity blarney read it's a wonder nobody shouted out.

Neither did anyone walk out saying to a friend "It's not really like the book at all." There are plugs for the Book in paperback at 75 cents.

Right from the start it should be made clear that the film is long on spectacle and short on "message" and sincerity.

Try this suggestion for size and see what I mean. "The Biblical story, like the American west, has been an integral part of motion pictures from the very inception of the industry." Like the American west image, Hollywood only seems to notice the obvious.

The opening sequences describe in tedious longevity how the earth was created by God in six days, and how on the seventh day He rested. Now after "three years of research and preparation and one year before the technicolor cameras" we have the John Huston version. The Authorized Version of King James is better edited and more to the point.

Producer Dino De Laurentis is well-known for his spectacles such as War and Peace, Ulysses, Barabba, and The Tempest. He is great on myths but the Bible is too much for him. The way he has had it filmed is just too much for me.

John Huston not only directs the film but also appears as Noah, and after seeing the film it may be that Noah himself foresees the Huston portrayal and named his son Ham, in self-defence, of course.

Huston can never resist just going too far. There is one sequence when the ark is being built where Huston gets his foot stuck in a pitch bucket and slithers down to join one of his sleeping sons. The boy slumbers on. For a moment Huston almost woke the audience up.

The main fault I find with the film is that it claims to be "authentic" but who knows what authentic means in this context.

The Garden of Eden is a good example. Why must this film go on giving glowing technicolor credence to the idea that Adam and Eve were white Anglo-Saxons? There are tropical animals in Eden, a la De Laurentis and tropical trees and tropical snakes and tropical fruits. The only non-tropical products are the main characters Adam and Eve. In this setting why are they not brown or black?

Scholars say the Old Testament is a compilation of many Semite legends and folk tales. The only actor in the cast with a Semite mien is Noah's wife and even she has a crop of blue-eyed children.

The evils of Christianity, and they are many, spring from such self-deception as perpetuated in this film. The film version of the Bible is a massive multi-million dollar monument to these concepts of racism and will only further the fundamentalist concept of the Scriptures.

Old legends are not presented as old legends but as actual living truth. The search for an actress to play Eve is an example. The blurb says De Laurentis was deluged with letters saying Eve should be a blonde. They found a blonde young Swede in Götterburg. She is Ulla Bergryd. When the scriptures were being written down on their scrolls the Swedes were still in war paint.

The film does have its better points. The animal shots are effective and the idea treated purely as a spectacle has some value. On the debit side the actors all seem self-conscious and the pace drags terribly. Still it may just catch fire. Some may want to see prejudice in action while some others may want to see their own prejudices confirmed.

Mysterious Skin Splotches Can Be Hidden by Cosmetic

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD
Dear Dr. Molner: My son has vitiligo. Please discuss it, possible causes, possible cures. What else could he do besides use that Egyptian herb and sunlight? Is it a liver disturbance? — T.E.

Vitiligo, a patchy loss of pigment in the skin which leaves pale areas or splotches, is a frustrating condition. The cause is not known (although it is not a liver disturbance). In fact, there appears to be no relationship to general health. It is simply that, for reason unknown, the skin loses its natural coloring matter in spots.

A tanning drug, extracted from a Middle Eastern plant, has been tried and in some cases has been reported to be successful. In other cases it has not seemed to help at all. Why? No one knows.

In any event, the drug has to be administered with care and with proper exposure to the sun, so if it is to be used, it must be under the supervision of a physician familiar with the drug.

Since vitiligo is not contagious, causes no harm to one's health, and sometimes corrects itself spontaneously, a special cosmetic which can closely match the natural skin color is the most practical answer. Aside from just ignoring the spots, that is.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard it is harmful to have X-rays when you are pregnant. I had X-rays of my neck before I knew I was pregnant. Will this cause harm to the baby? — Mrs. N.B.L.

It shouldn't because the rays were directed at your neck, not at the womb where the fetus was forming. (Every effort is made not to expose the fetus to radiation, especially in the early part of pregnancy.)

Dear Dr. Molner: My year-old baby swallowed a button last week, a little larger than one from a man's shirt. Can it cause serious damage? She eats and sleeps well. — Mrs. T.B.

I'd forget about it. It has no sharp edges. In fact, the button doubtless already has left baby's system. Note to F.W.S.: Yes, it is true that allergies often seem to play a part in development of polype, sometimes a change of climate may help — but there's no way to predict this.

Decorations Theft Runs in Thousands

Lights Go Out on Christmas Spirit

By MARK DICKINSON

Some Victoria residents are thinking twice about the Christmas spirit of giving and receiving — they've been taken.

Thousands of dollars worth of outdoor decorations have been stolen during the past several weeks.

"These punks are just wrecking the Christmas spirit," one irate theft victim declared.

"As fast as we put up decorations to make our homes and neighborhoods beautiful, the sneaky little thieves come along and tear them down."

Police departments have been flooded with complaints. "It's nothing new," a police spokesman said, "We get hundreds of complaints like this every year."

Mrs. Violet Britton, 3009

Scott, said her home has been raided twice in the past week. As a result she posted on her front lawn a sign that reads:

"Thieves stole all the lower lights — Merry Christmas to All."

She said Friday night she put up the first batch of decorations one week ago.

"A few hours later 75 bulbs were missing," she said. More decorations went up the following day and on Wednesday night thieves made off with another 40 bulbs and an entire electrical string.

Mrs. Britton estimated her loss at $25. "But the real loss cannot be said in dollars and cents," she added.

One home decorator complained that 10 minutes after he had finished putting up his lights a neighbor phoned to say the whole works had been stolen.

And the Shelbourne Street fire hall was struck by thieves less than an hour after the crew posted its Christmas message in lights.

Police, who said they have made no arrests believe the thieves are youths who "just chuck them away or break them."

Thiefs include colored lights, flood lamps, electrical strings, signs and models.

A Victoria department store said bulbs usually sell at 16 cents each, strings up to $6 a set, and flood lamps at $5 each.

And so the victims, who have lost a total of several thousand dollars, are left heartbroken, furious and dubious over the Christmas spirit of giving and receiving.

Civic Day Benefits Federals

Federal civil servants will have the day off on Boxing Day just like their provincial counterparts and most other workers.

A spokesman for the federal civil service commission said employees of the national government are entitled to one civic holiday each year. In B.C. this is Boxing Day.

Provincial government employees will have Tuesday off as will municipal employees.

All retail stores will be closed for the day. So will chartered banks though they will be open from 9 a.m. to noon today.

The recent provincial statutory holiday regulation, however, doesn't provide for Boxing Day as a statutory holiday. This means non-union employees at places which open Boxing Day are not legally entitled to extra pay.

Oarsmen Pass 200 Miles

Stalwart strokesmen of Signal-Hill Chapter of the Order of DeMolay have better than 200 miles behind them in their marathon row in the Gorge. Each mile represents 23 cents.

Rowers are averaging 2.5 miles an hour and so far the journey has taken more than 120,000 strokes of the oars.

The rowers have also picked up a mascot.

CLOSING TIME

"It's a seal," said organizer Doug Peck. "He follows us right up close behind the boat, then flips up in the air and splashes us."

Probably closing time for the merchant-sponsored marathon will be 4 p.m. today at Kinsmen-Gorge Park 100 hours after the start.

Originally the row was to help the 500 fund, but as it was now closed the DeMolays have decided to split the proceeds between an advance for the 500 fund next year and the Good Samaritan Fund of CKDA.

Girl Can Stay at School, Thanks to Yule Bursary

A Vancouver business firm Friday mailed a $240 cheque to the Greater Victoria school board to enable Sharron Ebert, 18, to remain at Oak Bay high school.

Larry Harrison, president of Soni Securities Ltd., said his firm made the gesture as "a sort of Christmas bursary so that Sharron can continue her education."

Last Monday, the school board decided it could make no exception to a provincial ruling which requires students in public schools pay tuition fees when they attend school in a district other than the one where their parents live.

WITH GRANDPARENTS Sharron is living with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ebert, 2377 Zala.

Her father recently moved from Pitt Meadows, 15 miles east of Vancouver, to Prince George when seasonal work dropped off and her mother is busy selling the family house and moving.

BY CHRISTMAS She was told that unless she could raise the $240 fee by Christmas she would have to quit school here.

Ten private offers to raise the money were made to the family but were rejected.

Friday night, Mrs. Cecil Ebert said the family would accept the offer from the Vancouver business firm because "it has not been made by a private individual, and this company frequently makes this sort of bursary."

GRADE 11 Sharron now will stay with her grandparents so she can complete Grade 11, rather than move with her parents to Prince George.

"We are pleased about this," Mrs. Ebert added.

"The family could have handled it ourselves given a little more time with no publicity."

TAKING INTEREST She said: "We feel that this company and its representatives are taking an interest in a class of student which we feel has been neglected."

Minor Accidents Pile Up in Area

What appeared to be an all time record in traffic accidents kept Victoria and Saanich police on the run Friday with almost every emergency vehicle engaged in accident chasing.

More than 25 accidents were investigated by Victoria police traffic department with the first at 7:45 a.m. Friday. In Saanich 12 accidents were reported. There was also one mishap in Oak Bay and two in Esquimalt.

Jean Pollock and Catherine Pollock, of 2915 Admirals and Brenda Sumter, 2886 Colquitz were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with whip lash from a three-car rear-end on Gorge Road and Government.

Police said most of the accidents were rear enders caused

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST

December 23, 1867

Martin the Wizard—We direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. Martin who will open his temple of wonders on Boxing Night. The program embraces some of the cleverest tricks of legerdemains and ventriloquism ever introduced.

Mischiefous—A rumor was in circulation Friday to the effect that the members of the Board of Education had sent in their resignations to the Governor. This mischievous report, we are glad to state, was without the slightest foundation in fact.

Handsome—John Ted, Esq. has presented the inmates of the Royal Hospital with one of the fattest sheep from his flock for their Christmas dinner.

Open-Issue Three Vs. Curtis

By DON GAIN

Three Saanich councillors said Friday there should be more open council meetings in 1968 but Reeve Hugh Curtis countered there has been no significant trend toward handling more business in camera in the last year.

"Closed meetings have been rare," said Coun. Alan Newberry, "but some very crucial matters were discussed at them and I think the meetings should have been open."

"I think Coun. Newberry is looking for a bit of year-end sensationalism," countered the Reeve.

OPEN MEETINGS

Coun. William Noel said he believed in more open meetings. "I agree," said Coun. Harold Todd. "I think all meetings should be open except when something of an intimate nature, such as a welfare case or the buying of land is involved."

Reeve Curtis said he subscribed to the open-meeting policy. "And the record shows that most of the public's business is and has been done in public," he added.

NOT IN FACT

"I don't think the observations of these councillors are really founded in fact."

The Reeve said he has no regrets about the amount of business done in public this year and in past years.

Coun. Leslie Passmore said he felt that all the closed meetings in 1967 were held in the best interests of the municipality.

UNAVAILABLE

Unavailable for comment were Councillors Edith Gunning, William Campbell, Ed Lum and Foster Isherwood.

Coun. Passmore said he didn't think council had held closed meetings on any matters which should have been made public at the time. All the councillors agreed there were times when meetings should be closed, such as during personnel discussions or when being briefed by the municipality's solicitor.

Pauline Hartman and chef Eddie Suech serve guests

Faith Staple Item In Her Kitchen

There's a Luxembourg chef in Victoria cooking stew for free distribution to anyone in need.

Eddie Suech arrived in Victoria a week ago like the answer to a prayer.

Mrs. Pauline Hartman, owner of a boarding house at 1003 Vancouver Street, had agreed with Peter Chau and John O'Connor that a place should be opened in Victoria to give hot meals to the needy.

"A week ago I had resigned myself to the fact that I couldn't find anyone who could cook, and I was just going to have to do the cooking myself," commented Mrs. Hartman Friday.

"Then my German Shepherd dog started to have puppies, and as I was acting as midwife, Eddie Suech arrived at the door."

"He came from Luxembourg about 10 years ago, and was in New Brunswick for some time."

Came West

"He decided to come west, but couldn't find work in Vancouver, and came on over to Victoria."

"He wandered into St. Andrew's Cathedral, where he was talking to Father Pierre, who brought him out to me."

"I could hardly believe it when he said he was a chef."

Mrs. Hartman said the dedicated group has enough food on hand for a week, and after that, she is sure something will turn up.

"I've always found that with faith things happen the way they are supposed to happen," she said.

The first meal was served to 10 people Thursday noon.

Good Omen

"I opened the service on the 21st because that is my mother's 73rd birthday. She fed about 20 men a day out of her own farm produce during the Hungry Thirties so it seemed like a good omen."

Mrs. Hartman and her

Free Food Ready For All

husband Dennis, who works at a plywood mill, have been in Victoria about 25 years.

"I've been running boarding houses for many years," said Mrs. Hartman, "but the people from St. Vincent de Paul often sent men and destitute families to me."

"They did suggest I open my house for needy people, but it wasn't until I'd seen quite a few cases of real need that I agreed."

The house on Luxembourg Street does have paying boarders.

Some Pay

"We have some people who pay, and others who pay a good deal more than they have to because they want to help the work we're doing here," said Mrs. Hartman.

"St. Vincent de Paul pays for some people, and the Welfare pays for others, but there are some who just can't pay, and you can't turn them away from the door."

She will take in anyone who needs a bed for a night or two until they can get a job, or for longer periods if necessary.

"One day an Indian woman arrived with three children and another on the way. She stayed with me for about four months, and I became godmother to the fourth child who was baptized in jail."

Families, Too

A year ago she opened her house officially for the needy. Since then 431 have received food, shelter and sometimes clothing from Hayward House.

"I've had several families stay with me since then," she said.

There are single men too, who without money in their pockets or an address could be picked up for vagrancy. The can all find a home at Vancouver Street.

Father Pierre of the Franciscan friary talked to Mrs. Hartman about her idea to provide meals for all, as well as rooms, and brought Peter Chau and John O'Connor, both agricultural department employees along to help her.

"There are so many people in town whose money runs out about the 15th or 30th of the month," said Mrs. Hartman. "They simply have nothing to eat for three or four days."

They Do

"There is so much food in this world I can't see why anyone should have to go hungry, and yet they do, right in this city."

"Even an alcoholic is entitled to a hot meal and a place to sleep, though the misery is of his own making."

"It's pathetic, they have to sleep by the railway tracks or in boxes behind old stores. I don't expect they'll ever stop drinking, but they should have a warm place to go."

"When someone comes here, we don't ask for money, we just try to help."

"If they can pay they will."

Church Helper

Mrs. Hartman has been associated with church work at St. Andrew's Cathedral for about 15 years, and was president of the Altar Society at one time.

One of her helpers John O'Connor said he hopes a group will be set up to keep the hot meals program going.

"We didn't go into this thing lightly. We intend to keep it up," he said.

Anyone wishing to assist can receive information by calling Mrs. Hartman 385-9253, Peter Chau 388-4046, or John O'Connor 388-6355.

Swathed in Bandages, But Improving

Burned Boy Faces Lonely Holiday

By NANCY BEOWN

Christmas Day will be a lonely one for 14-year-old David Doyle, 2780 Millstream, who will spend the holiday as he has spent the past 12 days — swathed in bandages and lying motionless in a hospital bed.

David was severely burned Dec. 11 when a can containing gasoline exploded in his back yard. He will receive numerous skin grafts when he is strong enough.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where he remained in poor condition until Dec. 16, when he started to show gradual improvement. "He can't move," reported his mother, Mrs. Lorine Doyle, Friday.

"He can wiggle his ankles and that's it."

Time passes slowly because his mind is active as only a 14-year-old's can be yet he can't move his head or hold a book to read.

"On Christmas Day the doctor has given permission for one of his friends to visit him for five minutes," said Mrs. Doyle.

"I go to see him as much as possible, read to him, and tell him news of home, but visitors are banned because of the risk of infection."

"He manages to appear cheerful, and he's a great favorite at the nurses' station because they say he's so polite and such a good patient, but today I heard him crying before I went in."

Mrs. Doyle said he has had cards and letters which she takes in and reads to him, then takes back home to put in scrap books for when he's well enough to look at them for himself.

David, she said, enjoys the letters most of all.

"He's always been a bit of a day-dreamer, and I think he might turn out to be a writer," she said.

"The talent runs in the family, so letters which con-jure up pictures for him to keep his mind active and away from the way he feels."

His school-mates at Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School have clubbed together and sent in enough money to rent a television set for a month.

"The principal says he thinks they will make a project of getting it for him in other months, too," said Mrs. Doyle.

"He can't move his head, so the nurses have fixed it up for him to watch television through a mirror."

On Christmas Day Mrs. Doyle plans on taking his gifts and cards in and opening them for him only to see.

"Then I'll take them home until the risk of infection is over and he's allowed to have them."

"I've three other children — two older and one younger — so we'll celebrate Christmas, but it won't be the same without David."

"I shall spend as much time as I can with him, as I do every day, but it's very difficult as I don't have a car, and the bus service from Langford isn't very good."

"If anyone wants to send him a card or a letter they will cheer him up a lot," added Mrs. Doyle.
